He has transport ministry on block in $67,000 battle over butcher shop

By Brian Fox
Star Staff Reporter

OLDCASTLE — Butcher Steve Palencar thinks the province is still "laughing at me" in his three-year fight for more money for his expropriated Oldcastle Cold Storage.

But ministry of transport officials say most of the laughs so far have been on them and they're not going to take it any more.

The ministry has given Palencar three options — buy back the property, pay rent or get out.

They had given him until Sept. 1 to make up his mind.

Palencar says he won't accept any of the options and he's still operating his business rent free in the 40-year-old building at Walker Road and Highway 3.

What Palencar will accept is either $80,000 for new freezers in addition to the $67,000 the ministry has already paid for his property, or a new facade on the existing building, at a cost of $54,000.

The standoff may have to be settled in court.

The ministry is now in a position to get a court order and the sheriff to force Palencar out, according to John Hare of the ministry's property department.

One more try

Hare said in an interview the ministry will make one more attempt to settle out of court, but if that fails, they will go to court to settle the issue this fall.

Hare described the Palencar case as among the most difficult to settle he has ever encountered.

Palencar, who says he has spent thousands of dollars in legal fees during the past three years, says he isn't about to cave in to ministry pressure and he vows to fight until he gets what he says is a fair deal.

Palencar and the ministry squared off more than three years ago when the province began expropriating land on the north side of Highway 3, east of Walker Road for a future highway cloverleaf.

Budget restraints forced the ministry to abandon cloverleaf plans in favor of intersection improvements.

However, by that time the ministry already had expropriated Palencar's cold storage and butcher shop, and in 1978 gave him a cheque for $67,000, which he accepted.

Palencar bought another building at Huron Line and Disputed Road, set his wife up in the variety store business and stayed in the Oldcastle butcher shop rent free.

"It's just not fair for him to have $67,000 of our money and stay there (his old business) rent free. He now has two businesses running on our capital," Hare said.

Hare said Palencar can rent the butcher shop building for $920 a month, but the ministry would rather he moved or bought it back for about $67,000, the same amount the ministry paid for the building.

The ministry is even willing to throw in a vacant property next door for a parking lot.

But Palencar, if he is to stay, wants a new facade and entrance on the building facing north, on to what would be his new parking lot. A turning lane was built at his front door where the old parking lot used to be.

Palencar said the ministry should construct a new front for the building so his customers can again walk from their cars into the front of the building.

That would cost an estimated $54,000, Palencar said.

As an alternative, the ministry could spend the estimated $80,000 to buy new freezers for his property on Huron Line.

It wouldn't be possible to move the old freezers, he said.

"I've got $50,000 pounds of meat," he said, explaining that new freezers would have to be constructed before he could shut down the old ones.

The ministry won't accept either, because according to Hare, Palencar's business volume just does not warrant the additional cost.

"There is only so far you can go with the taxpayers' money," Hare said.

Negotiations between the ministry and Palencar are continuing.

Windsor Star

Dissatisfied with Ontario board of negotiation recommendations, an Oldcastle butcher says he will take his case to the land compensation board.

Steve Palencar, owner of Oldcastle Cold Storage says $71,000 plus moving costs recommended by the board of negotiation as compensation for his business and home is insufficient.

His family lives upstairs in the building at the newly constructed intersection of Walker Road and Highway 3.

Palencar says the intersection is hazardous and is costing him business. He wants the province to pay for a new home and a cold storage business.

He says the noise of traffic from a turning lane disturbs his family. The intersection was built almost at the front door of the shop, he says.

The $71,000 plus moving costs was in line with the amount offered by the ministry of transportation and communications. Palencar says that amount would only replace his home.

As an alternative the board recommended that Palencar remain at the site but be paid $9,200 for legal fees and inconvenience, less almost $3,000 for a parking lot the ministry built for him beside the store, for a total of just over $6,000.

The province built a gravel parking lot for Palencar beside the cold storage to replace a lot in front of the store. However, Palencar has refused to accept the lot saying it is inconvenient and would increase his property taxes.

Curbs were built along the turning lane in front of the store to prevent cars from parking there.

Many cars jump the curb to park in front, creating hazards, Palencar says.

Noting it was going beyond its jurisdiction, the board of negotiation recommended that a low steel barricade be built along the turning lane to prevent cars from jumping the curb.

Highway compromise reached

Freezer firm to move

It appears likely that Oldcastle Cold Storage at Highway 3 and Walker Road will fall victim to highway expansion.

Steve Palencar, owner of the business, and the ministry of transportation have reached a compromise on compensation for what Mr. Palencar says will be a loss of business due to highway widening.

Turning lanes are being constructed near the Palencar home and business as part of improvements now under way on Highway 3 from the Essex bypass to Huron Church Road.

After a dispute Thursday with E. Bondy Excavating and Trucking Ltd., during which police were called, Mr. Palencar met with Ross Kilpatrick, ministry official in charge of property in Southwestern Ontario.

Mr. Palencar said the ministry will update an offer made two years ago to purchase his building.

The ministry offered about $67,000 at that time but Mr. Palencar said his business, which has living quarters on the second floor, is worth twice as much because of costly equipment and heavy insulation needed for a cold storage building.

Mr. Palencar, who wants the province to construct a new building for him elsewhere, said he still isn't happy with the province's promise to update their offer.

But he said he doesn't think he has any choice in the matter and will have to accept the money and look for a building elsewhere.

He's bypassed by a highway

By ROB VAN NIE

An Oldcastle butcher doesn't think he's getting a fair cut from the province.

Steve Palencar, owner of Oldcastle Cold Storage, is in a dispute with the provincial transportation ministry over highway improvements now under way around his home and business at Highway 3 and Walker Road.

Mr. Palencar says the widening of Highway 3 from the Essex bypass to Huron Church Line, including turning lanes at the Walker Road intersection, will kill his business.

Provincial officials feel they've gone out of their way to help Mr. Palencar. "We've been very fair to him," said Ross Kilpatrick, transportation ministry official in charge of property in Southwestern Ontario.

In an interview Tuesday at his business, Mr. Palencar said: "They're making fun out of me."

He pointed to construction vehicles digging a ditch across Walker Road, which had been blocked for the day, saying: "They should have a law against it... I don't know... they just go ahead and do it."

Although Mr. Palencar has used several legal firms to bring his plight to the attention of the province, a contract for the paving and widening of the highway was approved in March and work is expected to continue until early November.

Business will be hurt while the highway is under construction because of the detours and road blocks, he maintains.

And once the project is finished, he will lose the parking lot in front of his business, he says, and cars and trucks will roar by close to the living quarters of the Palencar family on the second floor of the building.

The province has offered to build him another parking lot away from the highway off Walker Road, but people won't patronize a business if they have to walk a distance from their cars to the store, Mr. Palencar says.

The ministry, which has expropriated acres of land and numerous buildings in Oldcastle for future highway expansion, offered him about $67,000 for his building about two years ago, the butcher said.

But he estimates the building is worth about twice as much, because it has living quarters and because of the costly equipment and heavy insulation needed for a cold storage building.

Mr. Palencar wants the government to replace the building or pay what he calls a fair market value.

With $67,000, "I can only buy a house and I'll be put out on the street without a job. This is all I know," he said, gesturing toward the business he bought 15 years ago.

Mr. Kilpatrick said the province told Mr. Palencar that if he wasn't happy with the proposed expropriation price, he didn't have to take it.

The government doesn't need his land to improve the intersection. "Maybe he was using part of our land for parking," Mr. Kilpatrick suggested.

Meanwhile, Mr. Palencar is venting his anger at the most visible target, the contracting firm which is doing the highway job.

More than once he has warned E. Bondy Excavating and Trucking Ltd. employees to stay off his property.

The Amherstburg firm is carrying out its contract with the ministry.

"I don't think I'll make a comment at this time," a company spokesman said.

A ministry spokesman in Toronto confirmed that the project should be finished by early November.

Sincere sympathy is extended to the family of George Palencar, age 75 years, who passed away at Grace Hospital on January 3rd. Suitcase saves Czech couple

By ANGUS RICKER

A battered Canadian suitcase proved to be a passport for a Czech couple who fled their native land this week. Mr. and Mrs. Imre Palencar were re-united with relatives in Windsor after a harrowing flight from Kosice in eastern Slovakia that began last Sunday.

The couple speak no English but according to Mr. Palencars' brother Steve, a cold storage operator in Oldcastle, the pair decided to gamble rather than give up plans for a long-sought move to Canada.

"Six months ago I sent tickets for them to come to Canada," Steve Palencar said, "and they decided after the Russian invasion either to get killed or get out."

The tension in Czechoslovakia is not getting any better," he added.

The couple boarded the train with many of their belongings stuffed in a Canadian-made suitcase that a third brother, Thomas, took back to Czechoslovakia after visiting Windsor a year ago.

The Canadian suitcase served as identification as only non-Czechs are permitted to leave the country. The Palencars also received help from a quick-witted travelling companion on the train.

The co-operation of Air Canada in Vienna enabled the couple to make necessary flight connections and established contact between the Palencar brothers.

Since Tuesday there have been several reunions among kinfolk. The brothers, Steve and Imre, had not seen each other in 20 years while Imre's wife, Elizabeth, was re-united with her brother, Michael Sedlak of Pittsburgh, Pa., after 42 years.

CZECH MEMORIES—Beautiful crystal from their native town of Kosice was one of the few mementoes Mr. and Mrs. Imre Palencar brought to Canada. The refugees were re-

Mrs. Maria Palencar Passes

Maria Palencar (Carny), 84 years, of R. 3 Maidstone, passed away on Wednesday, October 8th.

She was predeceased by her husband George (1973) and son Jim (1976).

She is survived by her sons Thomas of Czechoslovakia, Steve of Oldcastle; daughter Mrs. George Keltika (Elizabeth), of Maidstone; 18 grandchildren, 16 great grandchildren; brothers Thomas Carny of Cleveland and Paul of Czechoslovakia.

Funeral services were held from the Windsor Chapel Funeral Home, Windsor, on Saturday to Ss. Cyril and Methodius Slovak Church with Rev. John Moravsky officiating. Interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Maidstone.

Imrich Palencar, age 55 yrs. passed away on Aug. 17. Surviving is his wife Elizabeth (Sedlak) and mother, Mary, of Hwy. 3, Maidstone. He was the dear son of the late George Palencar. Dear father of Imrich Jr., Vincent, Frank and Helen of Czechoslovakia. Dear brother of Steve, Oldcastle and Elizabeth (Mrs. George Keltika) Hwy. 3 and Tom of Czechoslovakia. Deceased was a veteran of W.W. II. Funeral was held on Saturday morning at 10 a.m. from Janisse Bros. Funeral Home. Rev. Fr. W.S. Lacko officiating. Deceased was flown to Haniška, Czechoslovakia for burial. R.I.P.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Robert Palencar of Maidstone announce the engagement of their daughter, Deborah Louise, to Gary John Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Denton Thompson of Mark Avenue. The wedding will take place Sept. 20 at 3 p.m. in St. Mary's Church, Maidstone.

On Wed. evening June 25 Debbie Palencar, of Hwy. 3, was honoured at a bridal shower at St. Mary's Hall, given by Mrs. Earl (Doris) Beetham, Margaret Palencar and her attendants. There were 50 ladies present and they enjoyed an evening of games and conversation. Debbie, a September bride-elect was assisted by her maid of honour, Joyce McLean and her bridesmaids Pamela Dame and Mary Blackburn in opening her many lovely gifts. Debbie, then graciously thanked everyone present and a special "Thank You" to the hostesses of her shower. A delicious buffet lunch followed.

ALTHOUGH HE'S almost blind, Steve Pap still works in the greenhouse operation he founded

Gardener cultivates independent life

IT DOESN'T TAKE long for one to get the impression that Steve Pap is a likeable character who knows what he wants to say and says it.

"Take off your tie!" commanded the 78-year-old horticulturist and greenhouse operator after I had seated myself in a lawn chair outside his Oldcastle home. "What are ties for? They are a nuisance!"

And within a half-hour, two sun worshippers agreed it was time to also remove their shirts and have an intake of liquid for what became a 3½-hour interview.

JIM CORNETT'S PEOPLE

The well-tanned fellow who transformed some wet, low-lying land into the bountiful Flora Gardens on Highway 3 near Walker Road in the late 1950s was anxious to talk.

Herewith a sampling of facts and figures on the man described by the University of Windsor's senate secretary Barbara Birch as "a grey bear of a man with the soul of an artist and a mind like a steel trap."

● Although his eyesight is so limited he sees a person's body as a blur, he has written two books on gardening during the past five years with the aid of tape recordings. Both were sold out shortly after being published.

● At the age of 10, he temporarily became the head of the family, caring for two brothers, 8 and 5, after his father was imprisoned three years for union organizing and his mother died.

● Stephen J. Pap rose to become a Member of Parliament in Hungary on the opposition side and had so much to say he was advised to quit for his own good and leave the country. He did.

● He prides himself on the fact that he has never been out of a job and has never accepted "charity" since arriving in Canada in 1951 unable to speak English. Gravedigging at $17 per grave paid his expenses until his gardening did.

● He is responsible for most of the trees, shrubs and other plantings on the University of Windsor grounds through 25 years of contract work. His first stint there was done when he agreed to work in the greenhouse for meals and a room when the Basilian Fathers were running the university with little funds.

● He returns to Hungary occasionally to pamper his arthritis in the "healing waters of the Danube, containing sulphur and iodine."

So much for some highlights. . .

Steve's ambition while in high school was to become a chemical engineer "but my eyes were failing and I was told that if I went to university I would be blind in no time — I should do something outside."

He opted for the Royal College of Horticulture of Hungary after being told "you will love, sooner or later, your profession."

He loved it to the point that when he was 36 years old he was president of the Hungarian Growers Association.

After the Second World War he became a Member of Parliament with the Hungarian Christian Democratic Party, with 19 members forming the opposition against the 240 in the ruling party, the Peoples' Front.

"I left because of political troubles in 1948 when the Communists took over and big businesses were confiscated, schools socialized and the Roman Catholic church dissolved," he said.

"I could not be a free man in my own country," said the former owner of a greenhouse business in Hungary. He began wandering around Europe with a passport and a visa to enter Germany to study tulips.

"The minister granted me papers to leave Hungary on condition that my wife stay behind. My wife was seven months pregnant with twins. She never came to Canada. The individual had to sacrifice her life for the good of the whole nation."

Steve and his wife, Maria, a horticulturist who worked for the government, parted in 1951. He returned to see her in 1966 and she died in Hungary in 1969.

OF HIS FOUR children in Hungary, one came to Canada — in 1968. She is Dr. Maria Pap, who teaches mathematics at the University of Windsor and works in Flora Gardens, named for Steve's other daughter. Maria bought the establishment two years ago from her father.

Steve is disturbed that Maria is carrying on two jobs with long hours.

"That is her problem and my sorrow," he said. "She works 60 hours minimum at the university and 60 hours at Flora Gardens. From 5 a.m. to 9 at night. She cannot go on like that for long. She's like a woman in love with two men. She cannot choose."

Steve has cut down his 16-hour work day to six or seven hours a day.

Although his eyesight is extremely poor, "I can tell by weight whether plants need watering; if you want to do a thing you will find a way — I'm stubborn."

After spending three months in Toronto following his arrival in Canada in 1951, he decided to move to Windsor "because somebody told me Windsor was the Sun Parlor of Canada and no heavy snow there."

He was beginning to think it was true. On his first day, Dec. 7, 1951, "I was working in shirtsleeves — it was 62 degrees Fahrenheit — but then snow came and the next morning I was working in temperature of 5 Fahrenheit."

His first Windsor job was landscaping a doctor's home for $100 and he attended to it annually until recently.

His first book, Flower Growing Under Glass, dedicated to his first wife, was sold out — all 16,000 copies — in six months in 1981. The 10,000 copies of his second book, Floriculture, published in November last year, are sold out.

Steve married a second time last May. His new bride is Helen, an entomologist — "a scientist who deals with bugs" — who taught in Budapest. He met her in 1938 "and I discovered her again in the 1970s."

Steve's daughter, Flora, is a horticulturist; son, Leslie, an electronics engineer, and son, Steve, Jr., a librarian at the Academy of Music, all in Hungary.

OLDCASTLE — When he meets a woman, he kisses her hand with in the grand, European manner. Born in Budapest in 1908, Stephen Pap personifies continental charm, something of his homeland he likes to maintain.

Though he's been an established part of Oldcastle since the early 1950s, operating his own greenhouses, the native of Budapest still has vivid memories of Hungary.

"My books are sold out there now," he says proudly. He has written two books on horticulture and his most recent is about his life in Hungary through two world wars.

It was published this year and is sold out already. With a heavy accent, he enjoys an audience so he can retell those stories.

"I have very weak eyes. I'm almost blind now. That is why I couldn't finish studying chemistry in university."

He still loves to discuss math and chemistry. "I wanted to be a chemical engineer. My eyesight even then was poor. But I was determined. They accepted only 17 students that year in chemistry and I was one of them."

The long hours of study at night with coal oil lamps took their toll and his doctor warned him to take up another career or he would have no sight at all.

He apprenticed with a master gardener and took a few exams leading him to a job with the Parks Department in Budapest.

"By 1938, Hitler's shade was all over Europe. Many of my colleagues became Nazis. The head of the parks department was a German and he hired all Nazis.

"I COULDN'T stand the Nazis in the city. My aunt gave me a few hundred dollars and I started my own business."

At this time, he was elected secretary of the Hungarian Growers Association's 3,000 members. He later became president.

About this time, he married his first wife. Though they divorced after a few years, he kept in contact with her and his son.

With the coming of the Second World War, he did what he could for the resistance, he says.

"I would have my wholesale flower stand in the market and one university student in the resistance would come up to me and say: 'I am Joe. When Charlie comes, tell him I will wait for him at the bridge on the west side.'

"Well, that didn't last long. I was worried about feeding my wife and eight-week-old son whom I left behind in the city."

THE BABY hadn't gained any weight since birth because there was no food for the mother.

"I found a neighbor who promised me a litre of milk a day for a year if I could get the cow some food."

With a nephew, he was on the way back from the countryside where he had gone for cattle feed and meat for his family. "I couldn't get near the city. There were Russian soldiers all over about 13 kilometres outside Budapest.

"They were travelling the roads, blocking them with rows of soldiers and all kinds of tanks and cannon. I managed to get in between the travelling men and was away across a bridge with my crippled horse and worn wagon.

"We were stuck finally, when we got onto the bridge because it was worn with ruts and the horse couldn't pull us through. They were angry. I thought they going to throw us, horse and all into the river below.

"But about 30 or 40 soldiers came and lifted the horse and wagon and carried it over to the other side."

He got food to his son and when the war ended, he had remarried and joined the Hungarian Peasant Party. He was elected to parliament from 1945 to 1948.

"At first, after the war, for a few years the Communists let people open up shops and farm the land.

"Then one day they took over everything at once. It was Good Friday, 1948. They would go into a big factory and say to the owner:

"This is not yours now. Leave your car, leave everything and walk out as you are."

RELIGIOUS communities were ousted, too. "When the people heard the sisters were being forced to leave, they covered the street with flowers in front of the convent as a sign of respect.

"The sisters were walking on flowers but they were herded into wagons and many were never seen again."

Stephen liked to speak out against the misdeeds of the Communists. He said the Hungarians were mining bauxite and forced to sell it to the Soviet Union at less than the cost of production.

"A friend came to me one night saying: 'You talk too much. We try to cover for you but we cannot any longer. We advise you to leave the country.'"

With about $4 in his pocket he left without his second wife and son and daughter to try to open his own nursery in France, with the thought that his family would then join him.

There was no business to be had in France. He emigrated to Canada, living in Toronto and then Windsor.

"I was very poor. I asked the Basilian Fathers, who had a nice greenhouse in Assumption parish, if they would give me food and lodging if I took care of it.

"Finally, my clothes were wearing out and I told them I must leave to look for work with pay. They hired me."

He worked for the Basilian Fathers at Assumption University and then the University of Windsor for more than 20 years along with working the greenhouses and nursery in Oldcastle.

HIS DAUGHTER, Maria, moved to Oldcastle from Hungary in 1968. Her brother remained and their mother died just before she was to come to Canada.

Maria, who now lives next door to her father, spoke Hungarian and Russian and had two years of university math studies.

Speaking no English, she repeated her second year in Windsor. Stephen helped her by translating physics and math problems from English to Hungarian. By Christmas, she had mastered English.

Today she is Dr. Maria Pap, with a PhD in mathematics, working in the greenhouse and teaching part-time at the university.

Stephen is retired and this year sold Maria, 39, the 1.6-hectare greenhouse business. He tries to do a little something, he says, to keep busy on what was swampland when he bought it 37 years ago.

"In Hungary, I learned long ago there is no poor land, only poor growers. You have to work hard."

Father, son get jail for stealing radios

A father and son, both former Chrysler Canada Ltd. employees, have been sentenced to jail terms for stealing car radios from the company's Windsor assembly plant.

Joseph William Pantia, 57, was sentenced to 30 days in jail and placed on 18 months probation. William Clifford Pantia, 27, was sentenced to 60 days in jail, placed on two years probation and ordered to perform 240 hours of community service.

The younger Pantia was ordered Wednesday to start the community service within 30 days and to perform no less than 10 hours per month. The case was heard in Essex County Court.

The elder Pantia and his son both were fired from Chrysler Canada after they were charged with breaking and entering and theft Feb. 13, 1983.

THE ELDER Pantia had worked 31 years for the company and his son had been employed there about seven years.

The elder Pantia's lawyer, Harold Stafford of St. Thomas, said his client would lose about $200,000 in salary, assuming he would have worked to age 65, and more than $70,000 in reduced pension benefits as a result of being fired. The lawyer said he is receiving welfare.

The Pantias, both Sandwich South Township residents, were convicted in June by County Court Judge Richard Huneault of breaking into the plant with a third man, who had pleaded guilty.

Thirty-six car radios, some damaged, were recovered by police from the garage of the third man, William Roberts, 26, also of Sandwich South Township. He received a 90-day jail sentence and was placed on two years probation.

Couple frets as waves lap at doorstep

Mary and George Pantia needed help. They were frightened and didn't know where to turn.

This is the story of their rescue, one like dozens of others that happened late Wednesday night and early this morning after heavy rains caused severe flooding in almost every part of the city.

As fingers of lightning flashed in the black night sky, rain continued to fall.

The Pantia's home in the 2900 block of Langlois Avenue became an island with small, gentle waves lapping against the front step, but Mary, 83, and her 86-year-old husband, George, weren't in any immediate danger.

With their daughter-in-law, Margaret, they waited for firefighters to help them get out.

Fears storms

"I'm scared of storms," Mary said feebly.

She said she hadn't slept all night. It was 2:30 a.m.

"I was lying in bed and I got up and I listened to this and I listened to that, and when I looked outside... I've never seen anything like that before."

Then she called her daughter-in-law. Looking fondly at the elderly pair seated at the kitchen table, Margaret smiled shyly.

"They're not 15-year-olds anymore," she said. "They can't take this."

Mary nodded and George was silent.

"He hasn't said anything for a long time," Mary said of her husband. "He had a stroke last January."

Seconds later the phone rang. It was the fire department and the caller wanted to know what the trouble was.

"My father-in-law is 86 and my mother-in-law is 80," said Margaret.

"Eighty-three!" said Mary.

Water all around

"They're just frightened and they can't get out because there's water all around," said Margaret.

Moments later a fire truck arrived and firefighters cradled the pair to the warmth of a waiting car.

"It's been one of those nights," said Doug Horstead.

He and his co-workers had been on four calls in the last few hours. It was 3:20 a.m.

But their spirits were up and they smiled.

"I haven't had this much fun since I was a kid," said Chuck Doherty, as he slogged through the water in his large rubber boots.

"What I need is a cup of coffee," said Horstead, as he climbed back on the engine and drove away, probably to another rescue.

Firemen spent most of the night answering calls across the city and handling dilemmas which ranged from smoking furnaces to soggy, stranded motorists whose cars were trapped in water-filled underpasses.

Paquette Corners named for family

Wallace Paquette celebrates 90 years

Wallace Paquette, for whose family the area is named, has lived all of his 90 years on the farm at Paquette Corners. On Sunday his three daughters and two sons gathered at the Knights of Columbus hall in McGregor along with some seventeen grandchildren and fourteen great grandchildren to celebrate his 90th birthday. His children are Mrs. Doris Halford, Maidstone, Mrs. Anna Mae O'Rourke, Riverside; Mrs. Eleanor Sokol; Fred and Harvey of Paquette. A daughter Cecile died in 1959.

It was in 1867 that his father started farming on the same spot where his son now farms. Mr. Paquette remembers when the area from the railroad to Essex was solid woods with only two log houses between Oldcastle and Essex.

His father first did commercial threshing using horse power and later owned the first steam threshing engine in Essex county. When father first came here he kept a hotel and people from the lake area stopped here to feed and water their horses on their way to Detroit, their main market." Wallace Paquette said, "I've heard Ma say that the first spring she was here she could scoop a pail of water from the back steps. Cordwood would float under the house."

He remembers the old horse cars in Windsor. "I went there pretty regularly with my mother to sell butter, eggs, poultry and honey and I remember watching the horse drawn street cars come in to the corner of Sandwich street."

June 8, 1984

On Sunday, April 23rd, the family of Wallace Paquette gathered at the Knights of Columbus Hall, McGregor, to honour him on his 90th birthday. Mr. Paquette's father started farming at Paquette Corners, just a short distance from McGregor, in 1837 and the family still operate the farm. The area around is named after the family.

Mrs. Paquette passed away in 1946. There were six children born to their union, Fred J. and Harvey, of Paquette Corners; Doris (Mrs. Peter Halford), of Maidstone; Eleanor (Mrs. Andrew Sokol), Anna Mae (Mrs. Jack O'Rourke), both of Riverside; Cecile (Mrs. Merton Ward), deceased. There are 16 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren. The Essex Free Press extends their congratulations.

Herm Paquette, former Reeve of Colchester, says a man must pray to get any where in this world. Herm is a true believer that prayer can cure many of the world's ills. Very truly spoken by a man who has raised a family of his own with his good wife and also adopted and raised other kids from less fortunate families. Too bad "Han's" words cannot be taken to heart by many of today's unbelievers that church is old-fashioned in this country.

79-year-old farmer sees barn destroyed

Herman Paquette is 79. He has spent his life on a farm on Walker Road, a mile south of Paquette Corners.

Saturday night, he watched his barn burn to the ground.

"I'll be 80 years old next May 14, how am I going to start over again?" he asked as he watched about 30 firemen keep the flames under control.

Mr. Paquette farms his 75 acres himself and looks after his wife, who is confined to a wheelchair, with the help of a young woman who lives with the couple.

His livestock was saved, but gone were the corncrib, only two years old, and a wagon load of wheat.

Mr. Paquette's pump-house and granary, containing soybeans were also damaged.

He had been watching television when the fire started. It was noticed by people driving by the farm.

"The barn was at least 70 years old," said Mr. Paquette's son, Don, who lives in LaSalle.

"But it was in good condition. He really kept it up."

The cause of the fire is not yet known, said Colchester North Fire Chief William Miller.

Three Anderdon firemen were treated for burns received during the fire.

The Colchester North Fire Department called for help from departments in Sandwich South, Anderdon and Malden. Five pieces of firefighting equipment were on the scene for two hours.

Earn most

OTTAWA (CP) — Middle-aged male doctors practising in the plush lakeside community of Oakville, Ont. or slugging it out in the northern Quebec mining town of Sept-Îles are among Canada's most well-heeled citizens, according to a newly-released tax analysis.

A 231-page study of some 10 million individual income tax returns for 1972, issued today by the revenue department, again placed Oakville at the top of the list as the community with the highest average income in Canada.

Oakville residents earned an average of $9,945 in 1972 compared with a national average of $7,784.

The analysis says doctors and lawyers earned the highest average incomes in 1972. Men continued to earn substantially more than women and incomes peaked between age 40 and 44.

The so-called "green-book" on taxes, issued annually for the past 29 years, analyses Canadian personal income tax returns by locality, occupation, age, sex, marital status and tax status.

The study shows a 13.6-per-cent increase in average individual incomes between 1971 and 1972. Revenue Minister Ron Basford attributes part of the jump to changes in the definition

U.S. loan to Jordan

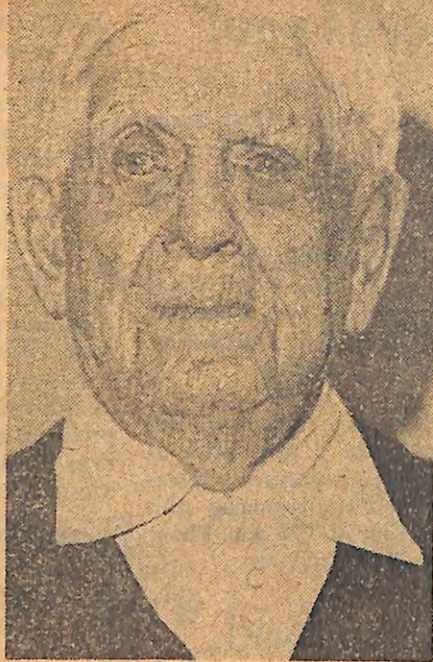

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — The United States has decided to give Jordan a $17.5 million loan to finance irrigation projects in the Jordan Valley, the Amman government announced.

PAQUETTE—Suzanne and Jack wish to announce the arrival of Kevin Thomas, born March 15, 1975 at Grace Hospital weighing 10 lbs. 13 ozs. Brother for Colleen.

100 years young!

A member of one of Essex County's pioneering families — Wallace Paquette — celebrated his 100th birthday recently.

Mr. Paquette, whose father Cyril moved the family from LaSalle to the present hamlet of Paquette Corners in 1867, led an active life in this area, running the family farm until age 80. He was the first registered baptism at the original St. Clements Church in McGregor, and helped haul stone from Amherstburg to build the existing church in 1902.

Mr. Paquette also helped run a hotel his father built in the hamlet in 1896, and replaced it with his own home built in 1919.

Born April 23, 1882, the youngest of 10 children, Mr. Paquette married the former Annie Dauphin in 1910, and had four daughters and two sons, one of whom still runs the original farm near Paquette Corners. He also has 16 grandchildren and 29 great grandchildren. Mr. Paquette received birthday congratulations from the Queen, Prime Minister Trudeau, Ontario Premier William Davis, Windsor-Walkerville MP Mark MacGuigan and Essex-Windsor MP Eugene Whelan, the latter a long-time card-playing friend of Mr. Paquette.

April, 29, 1982

We are glad to report that Mrs. Fred Paquette came home from Victoria Hospital London on Saturday and is making daily progress towards recovery from major surgery. We all send her our best wishes and prayers in her convalescence.

AUG. 28, 1987

Double Cousins

Two sets of grandparents gained two grand children within three days when the daughter and daughter-in-law of each gave birth to a daughter and a son.

Confused. Try again.

Pauline Gagnon Paquette gave birth to daughter Jodi, on May 1. Her husband Jim is the brother of Judy Paquette Gagnon who gave birth to son Ronnie, on May 4. And her brother Richard is the husband of Pauline.

Anyway the proud grandparents of both babies are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Paquette of Oldcastle and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gagnon Sr., of McGregor.

What's that make the babies? Twin cousins maybe?

PARENT

It's all in a day's work as far as Silver Suzy is concerned as she rides the back of her pal Tinka, a Boxer owned by Louis J. Parent of Peek-a-boo

Kennels. The Toy Poodle and Tinka are used by Mr. Parent to display how well a dog can be trained when using

School for Dogs, Owners

By ROSS STUBBERT

Dogs beware! It's school time at the Peekaboo Kennels.

And for the next 10 weeks, beginning Tuesday night, about 25 dogs and their masters will be taught the basic lessons of novice obedience. There will be St.
 Bernards, Poodles, Labradors and Bulls, and if anyone is interested, even their mongrel mutt can get in on the lessons.

Louis J. Parent, well known trainer and judge, and Mrs. Parent will be chief instructors.

"We'll teach anyone and any dog the novice qualifications," Mr. Parent said.
 "Trained dogs are a pleasure to have around and they're certainly better in the community. I think it's a community service to have your dog well trained."

The classes begin Tuesday night at the Peekaboo Kennels on Highway 3, between Walker Rd. and Howard Ave. Mr. Parent says he will give a lesson each week and the dog owners will give the dogs work-outs on that lesson until the following week.

"Of course," he added, "if it takes longer than 10 weeks for some dogs, and it usually does, I'll extend the classes."

The lessons include the heel, both on and off a lead, sit and stay, the recall, and the figure eight which means a dog must stay close to its master without a lead as he walks around people in close quarters.

"In general," Mr. Parent said, "we teach everything that is needed to enter a dog in the novice class of a show. Of course we don't say the dogs will win, that's entirely up to their masters."

He said it was really the masters that were given lessons, not the dog.

"We try to show the master the best way to teach his dog. Then he is expected to work the dog every night for about 15 minutes until it knows the lesson well."

Mr. Parent, who has been training dogs for about seven years says it is much better to teach a dog around other dogs.
 "If I train a dog," he said, "I always take him to classes. That way he gets used to other dogs and doesn't get excited when he's around them."

The course costs $10 and will be the only course Mr. Parent will conduct this summer. He says he will accept any dog six months old or better. "Younger than six months a dog is pretty hard to train," he said.

Last Tuesday Mr. Parent gave a demonstration of his two top dogs, a Boxer named Tinka and a Toy Poodle named Suzy. About 20 dog owners watched the demonstration and filled in an application for the course.

The dogs answered the commands of Mr. Parent, his wife and daughter, and went through the lessons which will be given during the course.

"I get a great deal of pleasure," he said, "seeing the dogs and masters the first week, then watching them the last week. They both learn a great deal, and the dogs handle very well in most cases."

Mr. Parent will accept new members of his class up to Tuesday night.

Mrs. Isobel Hart, daughter of Louis J. Parent, displays the correct method to teach a dog to "heel." Mrs. Hart and Mr. Parent are giving a 10-week course in dog training beginning Tuesday. In the picture at right, Mr. Parent illustrates the proper equipment needed to train a dog. The equipment includes a training collar, or choke chain, and a six-foot lead.

District Peke^{Oct. 12 '57} Winner Again

Bimbo of Peek at Me, a 2½-year-old Pekingese, who has more ribbons to his credit than he has months in his age, returned recently after adding his ninth "Best of the Breed" win while competing at the Burlington Kennel Club Dog Show.

Bimbo is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Parent of the Peke-Aboo Kennels, Oldcastle.

In several competitions, where he took first for his breed, he went on to capture the "Best Canadian Bred in Group" ribbon. In London, Ont., last weekend he again won best of breed and best Canadian bred, and placed third in the toy group.

Mrs. Parent, who has handled the dog in every show, said that it is possible to trace the ancestry of the breed back to the Chinese ancients.

The most difficult part in raising dogs is not the training of the animal, but the training of the owner.

At the Essex County Kennel Club, both owner and dog are taught to understand the other.

The owner is made to feel he is training the dog and the dog is made to feel he is training the owner without the other knowing he is the one being trained.

Started some six years ago, the club, now under the direction of Louis Parent, of Oldcastle, operates in the I.O.O.F. Hall on College St. at Campbell Ave., where one of the two or three 10-week courses per year will start Tuesday, March 18.

A Chrysler office worker and professional dog trainer for the Southern Michigan Obedience Training Club, Mr. Parent said the classes were started to help people to raise obedient dogs without the use of a whip.

"The average person who has a dog figures it is something to tie out in the backyard and forget about it," says Mr. Parent.

"The purpose of these classes is to educate people to take care of their dogs. But, as in the case of charity, the training of obedience starts at home."

"With these classes, we train the owner to train the dog. All we do is show him, for one hour every week for 10 weeks, how to handle the animal, the rest is up to the owner and the dog.

All kinds from showdogs to children's pets, are trained by Mr. Parent with the assistance of his wife, Violet. Over the past five years, Mr. Parent estimated he has trained close to 300 dogs from Essex County.

The easiest dog to train, said Mr. Parent, is the poodle. The hardest is the pekinese and the boxer, which are stubborn.

A dog story which Mr. Parent feels is entirely unfounded is that the toy breeds are easy to train.

"They're so small and low to the floor, you have to bend down to them and more or less get on their level to show them things.

"Nevertheless, most breeds of dogs are the same as people. Each dog has an individual personality but a healthy dog, which has been raised properly, will respond to the training."

The dogs are never whipped. They are first taught to "heel," or to walk on the left side of their handlers, keeping a steady pace.

When this has been mastered, the dog is taught to sit at a command while the handler moves away, leaving the dog alone where it must remain until the handler returns.

The dog is also taught to stop when the handler stops while out walking and start again when the handler resumes walking.

"Once a dog learns these obedience lessons, he never forgets," said Mr. Parent. "This course is better than training the dog at home. Anybody can train a dog in the backyard, but once you take him out on the street, he runs wild again.

"At the school, the dog is with other dogs and soon gets used to ignoring them and their antics. When you take him out for a walk, he then ignores any other dog that chases him.

"Of course we don't train the dogs for championships, but once a dog has completed the test it can, in three or four months, or maybe a year, compete in the novice dog class in dog shows."

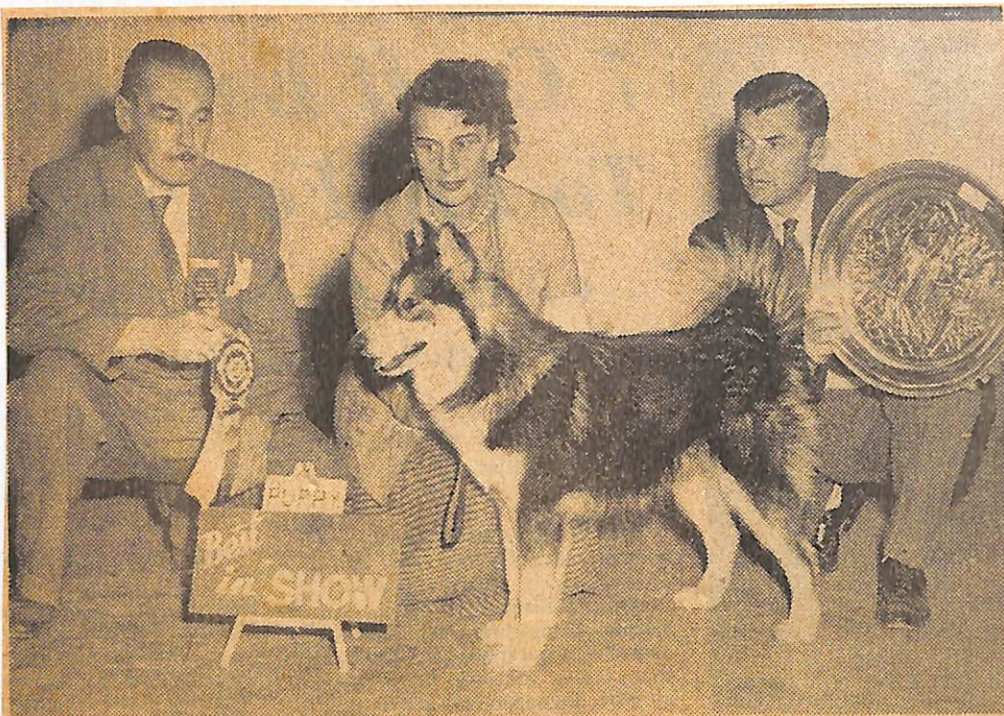

Once a dog has mastered these basic principles of obedience, it is awarded the Companion Dog Title, which is a Canadian Kennel Club distinction. With a little more polish and a few extra months of training, the dog is then awarded the Companion Dog Excellent title.

The hardest thing is not to teach the dog, but the owner, says Louis Parent, right, president and trainer at the club which operates from the I.O.O.F. Hall on College St. at Campbell Ave. Above, Mr. Parent shows what a dog will stand for in the way of mauling after it has been taught obedience at the class. The

These are the areas Master Gardeners in training under the Ontario Horticultural Society and the Ministry of Agriculture. They will provide information and advice on gardening problems for anyone. A telephone number and Thirty-five master gardeners are being trained through the ministry of agriculture and food (OMAF) and the Ontario Horticultural Society as an outreach of Guelph University. It is a new program for the county that was tested last summer in four areas.

Six of them from the Essex area will be qualified to give advice on gardening. They passed tests before receiving the training, will be required to write examinations throughout the training and to give 40 hours of volunteer work. That is done by manning booths in malls or at public events.

Rick Wukasch of Guelph University's pest diagnostic and advisory clinic, Doug Young of Ridgetown College of Agricultural Technology, soil management, and rural organization specialist Ian Rumbles conducted a seminar Saturday. Rumbles of the Essex OMAF office spoke on communication in dealing with the public.

District Director Charlie Bowyer, Windsor, said a phone number will be provided to give information throughout the summer.

Emphasis were on pest control with minimum use of pesticides in Wukasch's advice.

And if pesticide use is necessary, then follow instructions exactly, he warned. That advice applied to use of all chemicals.

Ways of controlling insects include looking for egg masses in trees at the end of winter and destroy them, harvest completely on time to avoid sap beetles in overripe fruit, put a sticky substance at base of trees to deter insects crawling from ground, use traps, hand pick insects and worms, wash off aphids with water spray, pasteurize soil for potted plants. On the last item Wukasch warned to be careful of excess pasteurization.

And there are predators and pests that kill the harmful insects; another reason for avoiding use of insecticides.

"Your allies are predators, parasites, pathogens. Every gardener should know them," he said.

Before one decides to use pesticide, the results should be evaluated.

"We need to persuade people to live with some damage (to fruit or plant appearance) rather than get the sprayer out."

"The more you discover about the insect world, the more you see it has its place. Know your enemies as well as allies. Our efforts should be to reduce, not eliminate."

His final warning was, "Know to spray at the right time with the right material in the right amount with the right equipment in the right way."

Ways of preventing plant diseases included eliminating weeds that harbour or introduce problems, keeping equipment clean, destroying plants with symptoms, proper management of compost, gentle watering.

And the best way to eliminate weeds in the garden is hoe, hoe, hoe, he advised.

location will be provided in the near future. They are Bonnie Teskey, Margaret Jeffrey, Margaret Kosokowsky, Sharon Teskey, Connie Vermeulen, Don Curtis and Doris Parr. Robert Castanier will also be a Master Gardener.

Parr-Price Wedding at St. Stephen's Church

At a lovely double-ring ceremony in St. Stephen's Anglican Church, Oldcastle, Miss Doris Jean Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norton Price, of Oldcastle, was united in marriage to Mr. George Findlay Parr, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Parr of Roseland. The Rev. G. C. Dickin officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of white organdie over taffeta, fashioned with a rounded neckline, cap sleeves and a full skirt which extended into a long train. She wore elbow-length tulle gloves which formed points over her hands. White lace daisies trimmed the bodice and skirt of her gown. Her fingertip two-tiered veil of illusion was held by a half-hat and she carried orchids and stephanotis.

COUSIN ATTENDS

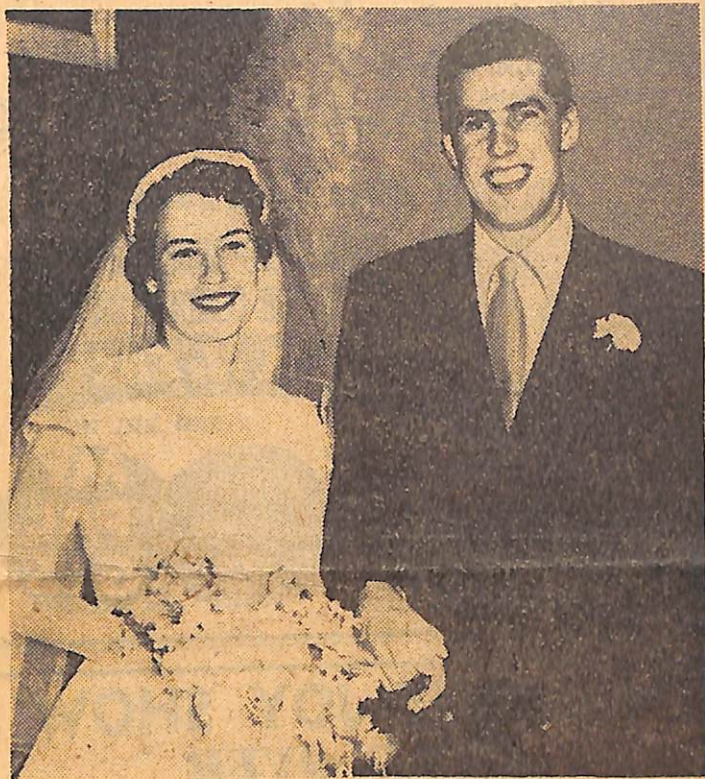

Miss Mildred Curtis, the bride's cousin, as maid of honor, wore a ballerina-length gown of white organdie over yellow taffeta, featuring a two-tiered skirt and a fitted bodice styled similarly to the bride's, and a wide yellow taffeta sash. She wore a matching Dutch cap and carried a fan-shaped bouquet of red roses and yellow carnation petals.

Miss Gloria Price, the bride's sister, Miss Nora Parr, the bridegroom's sister, and Miss Roberta Tofflemire, as bridesmaids, wore gowns styled identically to that of the maid of honor, but carried fans of red roses backed with pastel shades of tulle.

Mr. Larry Burton was best man and Mr. Gordon Parr, brother of the bride, and Mrs. Allen Parr, the bridegroom's brother.

During the ceremony, Mrs. Harry Pettypiece sang "O Promise Me" and "The Lord's Prayer." Mrs. Clyde O'Neil was the organist.

Mrs. Price chose a mauve figured nylon dress for her daughter's wedding. She wore white accessories and a corsage of white carnations and stephanotis. Mrs. Parr, the bridegroom's mother, was lovely in a pale blue nylon dress with white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

RECEPTION FOR 130

A reception was held in St. Stephen's Parish Hall for 130 relatives and friends. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake embedded in tulle and surrounded by yellow flowers and white tapers.

Mr. and Mrs. Parr left for a honeymoon in Northern Ontario and will take up residence in Oldcastle on their return.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. W. Knight, of London; Mr. Guy Bell and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Bell, of Royal Oak, Michigan; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hugh, Mrs. E. Deschaine, Mrs. E. Bostrum and Mr. Riffel, all of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. W. Pohoyoway, of Roseville, Michigan; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallich and Mrs. A. Stringer, of Highland Park, Michigan; Mrs. Roy Price of Hialeah, Florida, and Mr. B. Grills, of Meadow Lake, Saskatchewan.

English Style Horse Show . . .

June 30
1977

JUMPER — Baldy Chub won the first prize in Open Jump class for his owner Allan Parr, of Oldcastle, in the Essex Equestrian Association English Horse Show. Ellen Parr holds her dad's other wins in the day's events.

Ability to ride a hunter's course, to jump the barriers and to ride in style were the criterion for the English horse show held at Essex Sunday by the Essex Equestrian Association.

Karla Baxter of Chatham won the high point champion award as leading rider of the day among 70 participants.

About 200 persons watched the day-long events held at Fetherston Farms.

This is the only recognized show of English style riding held in Essex County under the rules of the Canadian Equestrian Federation.

Michael Taylor of Windsor won the small working hunter pony class with Poppy. This class was for those 14 and under. The large working hunter pony class for those from 14 and under 18 was won by Skippy who was ridden by Tanya Kleider of Windsor.

In the amateur hunter, the hunter hack and the working hunter classes, Karla Baxter was a three-time winner. Those classes including clearing hurdles up to 3 foot six inches. An even hunting pace, manners and style of the jumping was considered for points.

Beth Lesinsky of Kingsville won the equitation class for those under 18, judged on seat performance of the rider. The equitation class for those 18 and over was won by Sue Koellen of R.R. 1, Amherstburg.

In the open jumping competition over a set course, where the competitor wins by the number of hurdles the horse clears, Al Parr of Oldcastle was the winner.

Ribbons were awarded to the first four winners in each class. Mrs. P.L. Sugden of Cottam was chairman of the event and Mrs. Maxine Weller of Essex was secretary.

Congratulations to Beth Parr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Parr, who was this year's Essex North District's $100. Bursary winner. Beth also won an Ontario Scholarship Award of $100. She will attend the University of Guelph this fall.

Robert Parr

Co-worker Robert Parr says it's impossible to determine just who will and won't make it, but agrees a good attitude is perhaps the biggest asset a model can bank on.

"You may not be the prettiest around, but the right attitude and the right look will get you through."

And the right look? An intangible, admits Karen. "It's hard to define, but it's just something you can feel. You sense there's something there and you go with your instincts. A girl has to have certain physical qualifications, of course, but personality can compensate for a lot of flaws."

Wilhelmina, for years the top model at Eileen Ford's exclusive agency, backs the instinct theory. When she formed her own agency in 1967, she used her model's eye to woo and groom some of the biggest models in the industry.

"I think it comes from years of experience," she says. "You learn to know your clients and keep an eye out for what they want. It keeps us looking all the time, and we've found many models in the Canadian market who have the right face to launch the right product."

Today the "right face" is the wholesome face — the all-American girl-next-door look that intimates clean living, healthy exercise and a middle-of-the-road attitude. But the same girl-

Natures Best at Flower Show

From the dainty pansy face to the tall, stately delphinium June's flowers were in profusion for the annual flower show.

There were 19 exhibitors with 79 exhibits in Essex District Horticultural Society flower show at the Essex Culture and Recreation Centre.

A bicolor rose was chosen queen of the show. It was shown by Doris Parr of Oldcastle who also had the highest score in the adult division.

Todd Teskey of Maidstone Township totalled the most points for juniors and Dawn Parr of Oldcastle had the most in intermediate. They each received a trophy and cash.

Frances Langlois, of the Greater Windsor Horticultural Society, who judged the flowers, spoke of the excellence of specimens and arrangements.

There were four classes in each of junior (12 and under) and intermediate (13 to 21) classes.

Adults had 25 categories including six for hybrid tea roses, five for other roses, seven types of arrangements, a basket of mixed flowers, and six of other flowers. All were grown by the exhibitor, with the exception of arrangements for which flowers could be purchased.

Todd Teskey, of Maidstone, took the most points for juniors in the Essex District Horticultural Society flower show. He admires a basket of flowers by Doris Parr of Oldcastle who had the best rose in the show and took the highest total points. The intermediate category was won by Dawn Parr of Oldcastle.

Children Capture Flower Prizes

Thirty-two of the 70 entries in the Essex Horticultural Society flower show were submitted in the junior and intermediate classes.

Mrs. F. Parr of Essex was the rose queen of the show, held Saturday at the boardroom of the Essex Agricultural office of the ministry of agriculture.

She showed the best rose, a Tropicana hybrid tea in dazzling coral.

The highest number of points was taken by Bill Morgan, also of Essex, with 58 on 8 entries.

Senior winners were Doris Parr with a table arrangement; Elaine Demers, garden and foliage arrangement; Elizabeth Pettapeice and Marjorie Parr tied for best three flowers; and Mrs. W. Crowder took two first place with her hybrid lily and a daylily.

Among the intermediate winners Christine Gross captured the most points. She won first with a climbing rose spray, and tied with Laurel Weber on three annuals. Laurel also had the best floribunda. Dawn Parr's miniature rose was judged best as was her rose bowl arrangement.

Shirley Weber was top among juniors with best yellow rose and a tie with Chris Stanton on 3 annuals. Nancy Weber showed the best floribunda in rose spray.

MAY. 8. 1987

One student from each of the county's 36 schools received awards for excellence.

It is the second annual awards presentation by the Essex County Board of Education to recognize outstanding students in leadership, citizenship and academic achievement.

Each student received a plaque, presented by Board Chairman Joan Flood as an individual citation was read. The event was chaired by Director of Education G.E. Seguin who spoke briefly to the students and parents who filled the council chambers at the Civic and Education Centre, Essex.

The ceremony was one of many to observe Education Week, April 27 to May 1 and chairman of that special week committee Mrs. N. Gignac gave a message of appreciation.

Award recipients within the Essex area were Nicole Meloche of Colchester North, Peter Kistulinec of Gosfield North, Joy Scott of Maidstone Central, Jessica Parr of Maplewood, Rochelle Bachand, Belle River High School, Robin Lynn Sinclair of Essex District High, Nelson Couto of the Sun Parlor School, Rob Bastien of Western Secondary, Gregory Cameron of Jack Miner School, Lisa Settington of Ruthven, Michael Finn of Sandwich Secondary.

Young riders showed their skill at handling and training a horse at the fourth annual show for youth. The event was held at Happy Acres Ranch, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Damphouse of Maidstone.

Sponsored by the Southern Ontario Western Horsemen's Youth Association the show had about 50 participants of 18 years and under on either a pony or a horse but each in separate classes and classes were further divided by age of rider.

The Associations adviser, Wayne Wright, said their objective is 'to teach showmanship and sportsmanship and to develop responsibility in the youth.

There were 13 events. Judge Peter Hayes announced the following winners: Jeff Damphouse of Maidstone, showmanship at halter; Verna Parr of Oldcastle, showmanship at halter, 15 and over; Mark Damphouse, Maidstone on his pony, western pleasure; Ellen Parr of Oldcastle on her horse, western pleasure; Mark Damphouse also won the cloverleaf barrel race. Joe Fortin of Essex won the flag race; Jeff Damphouse won the trail class; Maureen Kerwin of LaSalle won the English pleasure class; Mark Damphouse, barrel bending class; and Joe Fortin the saddle-up race.

Youth Flower Show Winners

The young members took the prizes at the annual flower and garden show sponsored by the Essex District Horticultural Society.

The rose chosen queen of the show was shown by Carrie Weber of Essex. Her sister, Mary, took the awards for most points in the junior division. Dawn Parr, member of 4-H Oldcastle garden club, had the highest number of points in intermediate. Violet Woodruff of the Greater Windsor Horticultural Society presented the awards.

There were 19 categories of flowers including seven selections of hybrid tea roses and flower arrangements. Seventy-seven entries made it the largest show in recent years. As well Lee Weber reported there was a large attendance of visitors to the show held at the boardroom of the Ministry of Agriculture.

Valedictorian Stresses Nursing Career Thrills

During the past three years there were thrills innumerable for the 22 young girls at Metropolitan Hospital who were training for their careers as nurses.

They felt excitement and tension at their first operation; they were excited the first time they assisted in the delivery room; happy at the first class party, and speechless at the capping ceremony.

But none compared with the experience they shared as a team on Saturday when they were presented with awards, pins and gifts, marking their graduation as nurses.

This was the picture painted of the in-training period and graduation exercises by Nora Parr, of Windsor, who was chosen as class valedictorian for the graduation exercises held at Walkerville Collegiate.

The auditorium at the school was filled as close to 700 friends, relatives and fellow nurses attended the exercises, the first in the history of the hospital.

The girls represented the first classes of student nurses at the hospital since the training school was established in 1954.

Among the dignitaries on hand to honor the girls were, Hon. Paul Martin, minister of national health and welfare; Miss Dorothy Colquhoun, D.N., director of the school of nursing; Mrs. Harold Vaughan, member of the board of governors of the hospital; Robert Buckner, superintendent; Dr. J. M. Schulde, chief of the medical staff; Miss Ruby Thompson, R.N., director of the nursing service; John H. Charlton, chairman of the board of governors; Rev. George A. Wishart, of Emmanuel United Church; Con. Mrs. Cameron H. Montrose, representing Mayor Michael J. Patrick; Mrs. John Fry, president of the hospital Junior Auxiliary.

Special awards were presented to the four top graduates. They were, Mary Lou Stuart, first in general proficiency; Doreen Dulmage, second in general proficiency; Patricia Pickering, third in general proficiency and Marilyn Wilson, the student giving outstanding contribution to student association.

Miss Thompson presented the girls with their graduation pins; Mrs. Vaughan conferred the diplomas and Mrs. John Fry a gift from the junior auxiliary. Mrs. Fry is president of the auxiliary.

Mr. Martin said that he was happy that his last public act as minister of health and welfare was to speak to and congratulate the girls.

In his address, he told the graduates that the opportunities for Canadian nurses "never have been greater."

"In nursing, you will find an immediate sense of service that is part of few other professions or walks of life. You will find a deep satisfaction that your integrity, your steadfast practice of what you have learned with so much labor, will reward humanity.

"In recent years many new avenues of services for trained nurses have been opened.

"Time was when the graduate nurse did private nursing, chose to work on a hospital staff or in a doctor's office or perhaps joined the V.O.N. Little else was offered.

"But the present world calls more urgently than ever for well-trained women with those special attributes of heart and mind that go to make a nurse.

"Women of character are needed—women who are competent, intelligent, women who possess those priceless human qualities of understanding and sympathy; women whose high ideals of professional conduct and loyalty transcend the difficulties that are bound to be faced in an occupation so exacting.

"At any time, to become a nurse is to assume admirable responsibilities. But at this particular time in Canada's history, you are entering the field of health care in a period of development. At the midpoint of this century, one of the notable aspects of our national life is the really impressive progress being made in health.

Horticulture Society News

The Essex and District Horticulture Society met April 20, with 30 present.

The President Joyce Gold was in the chair for the business.

Nancy Whitlock is in charge of bulbs for fall planting. She gave out catalogues, so anyone interested may place their order with her.

On Sunday, May 8 at 9:30 a.m. an invitation to attend the Church of the Redeemer for the dedication service of the trees they planted last fall, donated to them from the Horticulture Society. There will be a brunch served following the service.

On May 8 there will be a garden tour to London by bus, cost is $34 per person. Anyone wishing to go may contact Gerry Brett, 776-8434, to reserve a seat on the bus.

We are sorry to report that the two trees stolen from in front of the BiWay Store will have to be replaced.

May 12 at 9:30 a.m. there will be a meeting of the Flower Show Committee.

April 12 and 13 was a two day flower arranging course when Shirley Robinson, a member of the Garden Club in St. Thomas, a qualified flower show judge, came to the Essex. Those present had fun learning simple technique to use a few flowers and branches to make an attractive arrangement to take home.

The program was the lure of herbs. Sally Meunier introduced Lee Gerew and husband Scot, who showed slides of herb gardens and Lee did the commentary. They had a display of the many kinds of herbs.

Those present enjoyed herb jellies and spreads on crackers and several herb teas. Bonnie Teskey thanked Lee and Scot for their work showing the slides of herb gardens and how we can enjoy herbs in the foods we prepare.

May 18 at 7:30 p.m., the next meeting, at the Essex Kinsmen Fieldhouse, Doris Parr will speak on How to Choose, Condition and Arrange Flowers to Exhibition Standards.

Preparing for the flower show June 15 at the Essex United Church. We are looking forward to a great show. Anyone wishing to come will be made welcome.

Parr explained that the Windsor school is affiliated with International Modelling Agency of Toronto and New York and with Wilhemina's Modelling Agency in New York, the second largest in the world.

He said it is hoped talent can be developed in Windsor for the Toronto market. The Windsor studios are equipped with makeup, wardrobe, photo studio and expects to have video equipment shortly. The Windsor operation hopes to develop beauty pageants and will provide a free placement service.

There are varying scales of fees, depending upon the services provided.

Parr, who is 22, is a Sandwich Secondary School graduate who was trained in the Auston school as a professional model and then continued as an instructor in the Auston schools. Hall, also 22, is a Vincent Massey graduate, who also went through the Auston system and functioned as a model and instructor. Badregon, 21, attended the same school and was also a model and Auston instructor.

"The contribution of the nurse to health care is a vital one and the opportunity for nursing service is steadily expanding."

A description of the hospital's training system was presented to the gathering by Mr. Charlton.

He said that the first year is composed principally of medical and surgical nursing with ward experience and practical demonstrations.

"In the second year, specialties such as obstetrics, pediatrics, psychiatry, operating room and tuberculosis are stressed by practical ward nursing. These two years emphasize nursing education in both theory and patient care.

"The third year is in fact an undergraduate internship and the entire time of the student is spent in the wards where they can enter into specialty nursing if they desire."

Metropolitan Hospital is one of three hospitals in the province which employs this system, but Mr. Charlton predicted that other schools will probably follow the method as it has been found "superior by those hospitals where it has been in effect."

Mr. Charlton congratulated the graduating class on behalf of the hospital board of governors.

At an impressive double-ring ceremony at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Rev. William Lawson united in marriage Miss Jean Elizabeth Payne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Payne of Roseland, and Lt. John Fraser Grieve of the Essex and Kent Scottish Regiment, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Grieve of Birch Ave.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, the bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of heavy white satin, with Alencon lace panels accenting the billowing skirt. The bodice was fashioned with a scalloped Sabrina neckline, a Basque waist and long sleeves tapering into points over her wrists. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held by a coronet of tiny leaves and seed pearls, and she carried a white orchid with stephanotis.

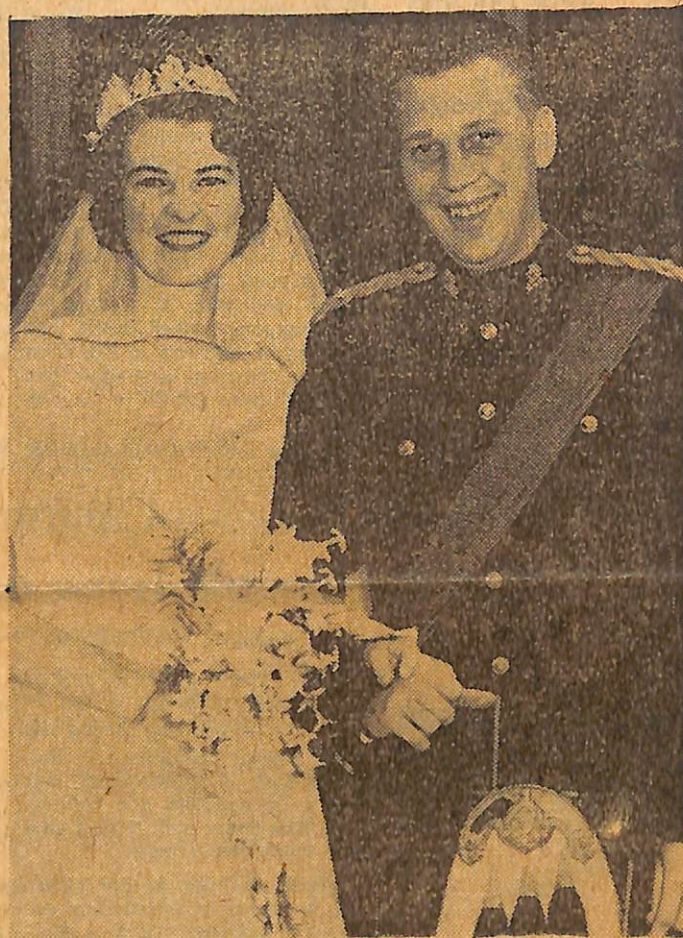

Miss Anna Payne, as her sister's maid of honor, wore a waltz-length gown of pale blue lace over taffeta with a bolero. She wore a bandeau of white lace daisies with a tiny face veil, and carried blue carnations and white baby chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaids, Miss Gloria Jessop and Mrs. Deborah McMullan, wore gowns styled identically to that of the maid of honor, and carried pink carnations and white chrysanthemums.

Mr. Jack Wright assisted the bridegroom as best man, and assisting as ushers were Mr. Don Feaver and Mr. Jim Elliot.

During the ceremony, Miss Betty Blackburn sang "O Perfect Love" and "I'll Walk Beside You."

A reception for 130 guests was held at the Prince Edward Hotel, the bride's mother receiving in gray French lace over rose taffeta, with a rose satin hat, and a mauve orchid corsage. Mrs. Grieve wore taupe Chantilly lace with rose and beige accessories.

LT. AND MRS. JOHN FRASER GRIEVE

The couple left later on a wedding trip to Eastern Canada and the Laurentians, the bride traveling in a white rose-patterned dress, with a pink straw hat, white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Lt. and Mrs. Grieve will reside in the Victoria Manor.

Out-of-town guests here for the wedding included the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. Jean Grieve of Detroit; Mrs. Hugh Cummihs of Fort Lauderdale, Florida; Mr. and Mrs. W. McFarlane, Mrs. Margaret Pringle and Miss Mary Jane Pringle of Detroit, Mr. Lyle Peterson of Illinois, Mr. and Mrs. George Gardner of Kearney, New Jersey; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dickson of Toronto and Mrs. William Gemmel of Glasgow, Scotland.

Roseland Man Is Married In Montreal Church, Wedding Trip To Cape Cod, Mass., Follows

At an impressive ceremony in Snowdon Baptist Church, Montreal, the Rev. Sidney Kerr united in marriage Miss Jeannette Elliot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Bell Elliot of Montreal West, and Mr. Donald George Payne, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Payne of Roseland.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of ivory peau de soie. The fitted bodice which extended in a point, was highlighted with a portrait neckline, appliqued with Guipure lace, and long sleeves which ended in points over her hands. The circular bouffant skirt swept into a full Chapel train. Her veil of scalloped tulle illusion was caught to a coronet head-dress of pearls. She carried a bouquet of pink roses with trailing ivy.

Mrs. Douglas Bell, the bride's sister, as matron of honor wore a pink ballerina-length gown of silkline, fashioned with a square neckline and band sleeves. The low waistline had a drape sash which ended in a loop at the back over the bouffant skirt. Her headpiece was a matching band of silkline. She carried a bouquet of daisy chrysanthemums with trailing ivy. Miss Joyce Elliot, younger sister of the bride, and Miss Mary Wilson, as bridesmaids, were gowned identically to the matron of honor in turquoise silkline and carried identical bouquets.

Mr. Wilfred Fryday of London was the best man and the ushers were Mr. Edward Elliot of Windsor and Mr. Jim Payne of Toronto.

For the reception that followed at the Montreal West Town Hall auditorium, the bride's mother received in navy blue silk shantung with a cape collar, orchid accessories and a corsage of pink and mauve gladioli. The mother of the bridegroom wore a powder blue dress of silk shantung and navy accessories with a corsage of pink roses.

For a wedding trip to Cape Cod, Massachusetts, the bride traveled in a navy blue ensemble with the bodice and jacket lined in a white silk with red polka dots. She wore navy accessories and a corsage of red and white carnations.

Out-of-town guests included the bridegroom's family, Mr. and Mrs. Payne, Miss Anna and Miss Jean Payne, his sisters, and George Payne, his brother, all of Roseland, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Bell and Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Elliot of Windsor, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Fryday of London, Miss Elizabeth Morrison of Ottawa and Mr. and Mrs. Roland Robinson of Sherbrooke, Quebec.

Air Observation

Most of us Canadians so far have escaped the ravages of war in our nation. Other continents have suffered but we have remained free and unmolested. So far our people take the idea of us being in the sights of an enemy bomber as a joke. Believe it or not it is no joke and the sooner we get down to being able to spot a unfamiliar plane in the sky the sooner we will insure this nation. Windsor the hub of Ontario industry is a most vulnerable spot as will the city of Detroit and most of us living a good many miles in the suburbs are just as open for calamity. Call it war mongering or plain talk is not going to help the individual who believes they are safe. Only one way will you be safe and that is be prepared. Oldcastle is a designated air observation post in any event of war. Many people will be required to keep out in case of emergency. Boys especially or the housewife or the retired factory worker will be needed. Your writer will furnish you with information here at the Oldcastle Co-Op at any request. From now on in any case do remember that your eyes can be peeled skyward and not downward.

Co-Op Insurance

Harry Pettypiece director of the Essex County medical Co-Op reports that the Co-Op paid 78% of its claims to the catastrophe fund of the society this year. At least four Sandwich South residents benefited by this most helpful fund that aided people with extra high hospitalization burdens. People who are interested in this rural hospitalization should keep in mind that new prospects will be taken on the Co-Op list on May 1st. See your local Co-Op for information as to how rural folk can be covered with medical and surgical benefits. People who transfer their policy from other insurance companys there will be no waiting period. If you have no hospital coverage in a rural community it will pay you to investigate this County helpful hospitalization.

CANDY STRIPERS AT RIVERVIEW HOSPITAL— Karen Pettypiece, above, is a volunteer candy striper in occupational therapy for the third summer. One of her jobs is to set up the weaving looms for the patients.

Karen Pettypiece, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Pettypiece of Essex Townline, has worked in the program for three summers. Karen's aunt, Nancy Pettypiece, the head of the occupational therapy department, interested Karen in the striper program. Not only do the girls see the one facet of hospital life, but they get a chance to see the inward workings of a hospital. From the experience Karen has gained as a striper, she has set a goal for herself. Karen wants to specialize in some type of hospital work, though exactly what she isn't sure. There are so many careers to choose from.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pettypiece who celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary on August 6th. They were feted at a family dinner at their residence by their daughter Diane and son Donald, followed by a reception from 7 to 10 o'clock. Guests from Cobourg, Tilbury, Windsor, Riverside, Detroit, Amherstburg, Roseland, Oldcastle and Sarnia attended the celebration.

Aug. 9. 1963

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pettypiece (nee Elizabeth Jubenville) of 332 Laird Avenue, Essex, were honoured on their 40th Wedding Anniversary on Sunday, Aug. 6, 1978 with a dinner party at the Hilltop in Ruthven, hosted by their daughter Diane and son-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jensen of Mississauga and their son and daughter-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Donald Pettypiece of Sarnia.

The dinner table was attractively centred by a lovely bouquet of red and white mums, carnations and baby's breath, flanked by white candles. Following the dinner, the guests gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pettypiece where the anniversary cake was cut and served. A toast, wishing them many more happy anniversaries, was proposed by their son Donald.

Relatives, present from a distance were some of their grandchildren, Tracey, Bradley, Myrna and Kurt Jensen and Heather and Lynn Pettypiece, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Banwell of Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. James Jubenville and Mrs. Sorrell Jubenville of Tilbury.

Mr. and Mrs. Pettypiece were the recipients of many lovely gifts, flowers and cards.

Diane Pettypiece, a bride-elect of July 18th, has been entertained at several showers, including a personal shower given by Mrs. Wayne Jessop and Gayle Geddes at the latter's home in Essex. A kitchen shower was given for Diane by Mrs. Henry Hartley and her daughter Ethel Jean, at her home. A miscellaneous shower was given in Diane's honour by Lynda White, Sandy Hutson and Roberta Tofflemire in Tully Hall. A trousseau tea will be given July 12th from 2 until 5 p.m., by Diane's mother, Mrs. Harry Pettypiece at her home. A rehearsal dinner will be held, Friday, July 17th, at the Towne House in Essex, given by the bridegroom-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Jensen, of London. Diane will marry William Jensen in Essex United Church. Her attendants will be Martha Fitzsimmons, of Toronto, as maid of honour; Mrs. Wayne Jessop, Miss White, Miss Hutson and Miss Tofflemire as bridesmaids and Diane Hansen as flower girl.

Jensen-Pettypiece Nuptials

Shirley Diane Pettypiece became the bride of William Eric Jensen, in Essex United Church, on Saturday, July 18th, with Rev. Gordon Geiger officiating. They will live at 1404 Queen Victoria Ave., Lorne Park, after a trip to the East Coast.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pettypiece, of Oldcastle and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jensen, of London.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ice pink organza over matching faille, the neckline applied with seed pearls on Alencon lace. The gown featured a cathedral train and elbow-length sleeves. Her tiered illusion veil was caught to her head with a double crown of orange blossoms and she carried a cascade of pink cymbidium orchids, white chrysanthemums and stephanotis.

Martha Fitzsimmons, of Toronto, was maid of honor and Mrs. Wayne Jessop, of Toronto; Lynda White, Sandra Hutson and Roberta Tofflemire were bridesmaids. Diane Hansen, of Oldcastle, was flower girl.

The maid of honour and bridesmaids wore street-length dresses of pink lace over white faille with matching headpieces, white accessories and carried cascades of pink and white mums.

The bride's twin brother, Donald Pettypiece, was best man and the ushers were John Bone, Ivan Jensen, brother of bridegroom, Gary Jubenville, the bride's cousin, and Ted Johns, of Toronto.

Receptions were held at the bride's parents' home and at the Poplar Inn, Cottam. For her wedding trip the bride wore a beige cotton lace suit, white and brown accessories and a pink orchid corsage.

For her daughter's wedding, the bride's mother chose a champagne beige crepe sheath with a matching lace jacket, pink hat, beige accessories and a corsage of pink mums. The groom's mother wore a silver blue shantung sheath, white accessories and a corsage of pink mums.

Here from Toronto for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Ted Johns, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Irwin and Linda, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Jessop, Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Jubenville. Lorne Park guests were Carole Jensen, Cynthia Jensen, and Daryll Jensen. Guests from Streetsville were Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Jessop, daughter Linda and son Neal, and from Sarnia, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith and Emily. Guests from London were Mr. and Mrs. Hans Theilade, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hohansson, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Jensen, Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Johnston. Also here for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Murdock, of Waterford; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Banwell, Chris, Michael and Douglas, of Kingston; Mrs. George Brewer, of Detroit; Mrs. Roy Fisher and daughter Nancy, and Mr. and Mrs. Brownie Podskalney, of Plymouth, Mich.

This One's A Woman's Sport . . .

ST. CLAIR JUNIOR NETBALL TEAM — Karen Pettypiece, of Oldcastle, a player on the Junior Netball team of St. Clair College attempts to thwart the toss for the basket of a Toronto team member in the 12-Team Tournament held at St. Clair on Sunday. The game is new to Canada and this is the first year of participation for St. Clair. Patterned along the lines of basketball, it is strictly a woman's game with no bodily contact and only passing of the ball allowed.

A new game in Canada, netball, has come to St. Clair College.

Strictly a woman's sport, the game rules out body contact, minimizing the possibility of injury.

St. Clair College has three teams this year for the first time and hosted a tournament on the weekend, in competition with 9 teams from the Toronto area.

The first competition in Canada was held in 1971 in Toronto.

There are 7 women on a team with only 2 of them allowed to shoot. Each player has a specified area of the court in which she can play. A player is not allowed to move while in possession of the ball but can pivot from one foot in that spot to change direction. The ball can be held only for 3 minutes before passing. There is no bouncing as in basketball - the game it most closely resembles.

The length of a game is four 15 minute periods and the clock does not stop while the team is out of play for a penalty.

At the tournament held at St. Clair College on Sunday the 3 St. Clair teams put up a good show against the more experienced Toronto area teams. Toronto's Western was the winning team and took the championship trophy in a final game against the President 7's, also from Toronto. Windsor won some and lost some - it was actually 2 wins and 3 losses, not bad for the first year.

Ads of long ago featuring painless dentists and granite silk stockings contributed by Harry Pettypiece

Fifty four years ago the Hudson Store ad in the November Detroit News featured a sale of silks and included Japanese shantung, hand woven at $1.10 a yard; silk stockings made expressly for the J.L. Hudson Company at $1.75 a pair under the "Granite" brand name with double threads over the knee. A Christmas special featured silk envelopes of pink crepe de chene at $2.95 each. If your curiosity is aroused over silk envelopes, the delicately worded ad described them as "excellent quality in delicate pink, trimmed back and front and around the bottom with Valenciennes lace. She LOVES silk underwear."

An ad for "Cream of Barley" breakfast food pictured a very matronly mother rather than the accent on youth seen today. Another vities. Their work was guaranteed to be pain less and their hours were advertised as, "from morning's light 'till nine at night."

And of course, no paper of 1918 would be complete without an ad for a Jewel hot blast heater at $24.50 and a combination coal and gas range from $54. to $97.50, or a handsome iron bed.

Most surprising of all was the invitation to buy a "Grafanola" (phonograph) on a membership in a charge account club with $1. down and $1. a week on a $32.50 model.

Miss Nancy Pettypiece of Simcoe spent the weekend with her mother Mrs. Russell Pettypiece.

Mrs. Joseph Livingston, son Allen and daughter Erin of Eugene, Oregon arrived by air on Friday for a visit with her mother Mrs. Russell Pettypiece and other relatives in this area.

Those Who Give...and Receive

Nov. 3 - '65

Week after week men and women from all walks of life are meeting in Windsor for different reasons . . . to aid the handicapped, assist the underprivileged and to donate money. But regardless of their reasons, they meet for one cause—to advance the 20th United Fund campaign in metropolitan Windsor. The money is donated by such groups as the nine employees of Valco Manufacturing Ltd., 7470 Tecumseh Rd. E., and given to support social and welfare agencies such as the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation that handles the work of co-ordinating facilities to aid handicapped persons.

Upper photo shows the nine Valco employees who have put together a 100 per cent effort and raised $384—an average of almost $43 per man. From left, Al Taylor, Renato Arusi, Dante Del Rizzo, Michael Esipu, John Barnard, Fred Graham, Frank Flannery, Kenneth Gehl and Bob Lovecky.

Lower photo shows the people who represent some of the services provided through the efforts of the institute, Mrs. Anita Loaring, a physiotherapist; G. Hudson Strickland of Goodwill Industries; Miss Ann Evans, a speech therapist; Mrs. M. M. Graves, executive director of the institute; Miss Nancy Pettypiece, occupational therapist; Brenden Montgomery, department of public welfare, and Frank Morgan, department of health.

1927 OLDCASTLE TITANS

Pettypiece-Jackson Wedding Is Solemnized at St. Stephen's

At a lovely candlelight setting in St. Stephen's Church, Oldcastle, the Rev. G. C. Dickin and the Rev. Joseph Tully united in marriage Miss Eleanor Marion Jackson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Jackson of Oldcastle, and Mr. Brien Russell Pettypiece, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Pettypiece of Oldcastle.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white slipper satin, fashioned with a square neckline edged in lace and a full skirt styled with a lace pepum. Her veil of illusion was held with a spray of orange blossoms, and she carried red roses.

MAID OF HONOR

Miss Nancy Pettypiece, as maid of honor, wore a gown of orchid taffeta, featuring a bustle and tiny cap sleeves and a Bertha. Her headdress was of orchid net and she carried pink and white carnations.

Mr. Doug Pettypiece, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Olin Huggard and Mr. Carl Berl. Mr. Ejay O'Neil sang "I Love You Truly" and "Through the Years," and Mrs. Clyde O'Neil played the wedding music.

A reception followed in the parish hall. Mrs. Jackson chose for her daughter's wedding a dress of loganberry crepe and wore white carnations. Mrs. Pettypiece, mother of the bridegroom, wore a black and white jersey print and pink carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Pettypiece left later on a wedding trip through Ohio and will visit Niagara Falls. They will live in Oldcastle.

Jensen-Pettypiece

ESSEX—Shirley Diane Pettypiece became the bride of William Eric Jensen in Essex United Church with Rev. Gordon Geiger officiating. They will live at 1404 Queen Victoria Ave., Lorne Park, after a trip to the East Coast.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pettypiece of Oldcastle and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jensen of London.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ice pink organza over matching faille, the neckline appliqued with seed pearls on Alencon lace. The gown featured a cathedral train and elbow-length sleeves. Her tiered illusion veil was caught to her head with a double crown of orange blossoms and she carried a cascade of pink cymbidium orchids, white chrysanthemums and stephanotis.

Martha Fitzsimmons of Toronto was maid of honor and Mrs. Wayne Jessop of Toronto, Lynda White, Sandra Hutson and Roberta Tofflemire were bridesmaids. Diane Hansen of Oldcastle was flower girl.

The bride's twin brother, Donald Pettypiece, was best man and the ushers were John Bone, Ivan Jensen, brother of the bridegroom; Garry Jubenville, the bride's cousin, and Ted Johns of Toronto.

Receptions were held at the bride's parents' home and at the Poplar Inn, Cottam. For a trip the bride chose a beige cotton lace suit, white and brown accessories and a pink orchid corsage.

Mavis Hauser and Mrs. Elizabeth Pettypiece get ready for Fashion Show.

It takes a lot of planning and hard work to organize a Fashion Show such as the one held at Maplewood Auditorium on March 13th. The following stores are to be commended on their successful effort - Daff's, Golden Gift Box, Lighting by Lee, Essex Flower Basket and Cameo Hair Styles. A good crowd attended and enjoyed a look at a wide variety of styles for the teenager as well as the older woman, ably commented on by Mavis Hauser, co-owner with Mrs. Cowan of Daff's. Sport clothes, both day and night wear and lovely negligees were shown by the models. Coffee and cookies were served at the close of the show by members of the Senior citizens auxiliary. A list of the beautiful door prizes drawn for in intermission and at end of show with their donors, is as follows:

Essex Nursing Home, Tray, No. 89, Mrs. Grieves; Golden Gift Box, Teapot, No. 289, Mrs. Williamson; Lighting by Lee, Chandelier, No. 339, Mrs. Wuerch; Essex Flower Basket, Bud Vase, Mrs. Sylvia Hyland; Daff's, Beige Handbag, No. 357, Mrs. Mitchell; Golden Gift Box, Cream and sugar, No. 212, Jeannie Maguhm; Daff's, Bracelet and earrings, No. 34, Sue Sherman; Essex Free Press, Stationary, No. 359, Mrs. Mabel Watts; Essex Flower Basket, Bud Vase, No. 354, Mrs. Hazel Buhler; Golden Gift Box, Cup and saucer, No. 372, Mrs. Doug Sadler; Daff's, Silk Scarf, No. 12, Gladys Robinson; Golden Gift Box, Cake plate, No. 387, Edna Maedel; Daff's, Panty Hose, No. 24, Mrs. Doug McKelvie; Daff's, Necklace, No. 320, Deborah Hell; Essex Flower Basket, Table arrangement, No. 386, Olive Gee, Daff's, Clutch Bag, No. 29, Mrs. Courtney; Essex Flower Basket, Flower arrangement, No. 142; Daff's, Evening Bag, No. 164, Mrs. E. Beeman.

A thank you from Daff's to everyone who helped make the Fashion Show a success.

MARCH 23, 1973

Toronto for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Ted Johns, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Irwin and Linda and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Jessop. Lorne Park guests were Carole Jensen, Cynthia Jensen and Daryll Jensen. Guests from London were Mr. and Mrs. Hans Theilade, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hohansson, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Jensen and Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Johnson. Also here for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Murdock of Waterford and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Banwell and Chris, Mike and Dougie of Kingston.

Diane Pettypiece, a bride-elect of July 18, has been entertained at several showers, including a personal shower given by Mrs. Wayne Jessop and Gayle Geddes at the latter's home in Essex. A kitchen shower was given for Diane by Mrs. Henry Hartley and her daughter, Ethel Jean, at their home in Oldcastle. Another shower was given in Diane's honor by Lynda White, Sandy Hutson and Roberta Tofflemire at Tully Hall in Oldcastle. A trousseau tea will be given July 12 from 2 until 5 p.m. by Diane's mother, Mrs. Henry Pettypiece, at her home in Oldcastle. A rehearsal dinner will be held July 17 at the Town House in Essex, given by the bridegroom-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Jensen of London. Diane will marry William Jensen in Essex United Church. Her attendants will be Martha Fitzsimmons of Toronto, as maid of honor, Mrs. Jessop, Miss White, Miss Hutson and Miss Tofflemire, as bridesmaids, and Diane Hanson as flower girl.

At the Church of the Redeemer June 30th, Morning Prayer and Sermon at 9:30 a.m.

Mrs. Russell Pettypiece and daughter, Nancy R.N. returned recently from a delightful tour of England and Southern Ireland. They spent two delightful days with Rev. and Mrs. Peter Ralph Bowman down in Somerset and another enjoyable day with Rev. and Mrs. E.C. Grey of Bowdon. Mrs. Pettypiece had the pleasure of meeting for the first time an English pen pal with whom she had corresponded since she was fourteen. In Eire they visited the beautiful city of Dublin, Killarney, and other points of interest, especially enjoying the green of the country side and the blue of the numerous lakes.

Did you read the interesting article in the July 7 edition of the Essex Free Press, the title "Harry's Barn Records History". Harry Pettypiece now retired and living at 332 Laird Ave., Essex has made a 54 x 30 inch scale model on the raising of the barn on his family farm on the Essex townline in Colchester North Twp. A picture of the barn raising prompted Harry to build the scale model, which he started in the fall of 1976, and recently completed. It is an exquisite piece of art. Congratulations Harry on a wonderful project.

Only the waistline won't miss Gracey

By MARTYGERVAIS

ESSEX — The cars, transport trucks and delivery vans scattered in a nearby parking lot and on the road outside "Gracey's" lunch counter are proof enough the meals here are delicious.

The truck stop is nestled in a Texaco garage and the sign hanging outside its doors is extremely inconspicuous — but it matters little.

In 20 years of service, the word has spread that Gracey McDowell serves the best home-cooked meals and pastry anywhere.

Unfortunately, all of this is about to end. Gracey is about to follow her husband, a delivery man for Essex Farmers, into retirement.

She intends to close up shop when he quits in the spring.

Mrs. McDowell has worked by herself behind the counter in the steamed-up front section of Steed's Texaco Gas station for more than two decades.

"There isn't enough room in here for someone else to work behind the counter, so I have had to do it myself," she said.

A helper comes in once a week, allowing Mrs. McDowell to go home to do the baking which has made her coffee shop known all over Essex County.

Mrs. McDowell's hard work has not gone unrewarded by the truckers.

They bring gifts to the white-haired lady who serves them slices of pies at least 1 1/2 inches thick. It isn't uncommon to see a florist shop driver wolf down a hefty breakfast, then run out to his van to select a bouquet of fresh flowers for her to bring home. She thanks them with an extra helping at lunch or a large piece of pie.

Ward Steed, the owner of the gas station which rents the restaurant space to Mrs. McDowell, says he doesn't know how she can be replaced.

"She's been here all these years and people have come to know and like the food," he said.

Mrs. McDowell is known for her pastry—the pineapple, strawberry, apple and blueberry pies, as well as the butter tarts and muffins.

"I learned to cook from my mother, mostly, but I learned to make pie crust from a lady who taught me in her home," she said.

Her cooking days started long before the restaurant. She operated a boarding house outside of Essex for several years "and I had to cook some pretty big meals for the people who stayed with us."

Retirement for Mrs. McDowell will mean travelling.

She intends "to see the world a little bit and settle down, too," but admits she will probably continue cooking pastry by order.

"I'm already doing that. If someone wants pies or whatever, I'll do it, providing they give me the time."

Her enjoyment of baking has no limit, she says, and she secretly admits that if the new coffee shop owner wants a weekly supply of home-cooked pies, the lunch counter will have them.

A miniature barn-raising bee

By EVELYN WALKER

ESSEX — The framing is almost complete and the 48 men are in their positions at a barn-raising bee... just as it might have been done more than 50 years ago.

But it will never be finished. It's a scale model, built by Harry Pettypiece of Essex, as a visual record of how the work was done years ago, with men the only source of power.

Two men are squaring the last timber, one notching along the side before knocking off the chunks of wood to remove the roundness of the log, the other skilfully swinging the broad axe to square the side evenly. Harry's three-inch model broadaxe even has the usual curved handle.

Actually the timbers were measured, cut, and squared and the mortises and tenons made during the previous winter before a barn-raising bee, but Harry has the men working at one side just to show how it was done.

The mortises, — oblong holes to hold the tenon of the timber that was to run at right angles to the timber with the mortise — were drilled and shaped by hand, using an auger. There were two types: one with a crossed wooden handle that could be twisted by hand, or a simple geared boring machine which was cranked by one or two men.

If the mortise was to be cut completely through the 10 or 12-inch timber or beam, it would be cleaned and shaped with broad flat chisels and corner chisels.

Harry has all this recorded as a reference to go with his model. His chisels are less than an inch long. Strips of tin were used to make the tools. A piece about half an inch wide was wrapped around a length of whittled wood about the size of a match in diameter. The two ends of the tin strip were welded together and then shaped into the wedge of an axe head.

The models of the men were made from plastic soldiers. "All I could find was plastic soldiers. So I cut the guns away, then reshaped the arms and made suitable clothes for them. Those I wanted to have sitting on the beams, I had to cut off their legs and fit on some I made with plaster."

Everything is there to depict all the required work, even to an inch-cube that represents the chunk of stump being cut into pegs to hold the tenons. To make it authentic he has grandpa sitting on a stump, overseeing the procedure, with his bottle of whisky at his side.

The written description says the tenons were formed as an extension on the ends of those timbers that were to fit into the mortises. Once in place, a one-inch hole was drilled across the mortise and tenon to receive the wooden pin that would secure the joint.

All but one side of the barn is in place in Harry's model. The corner braces of hardwood two-by-fours are mortised and wedged into place diagonally. The last wall is positioned on the foundation. Several men are pushing each spiked pole which is speared into the timber across the end wall. The ropes and chains, that would prevent it from slipping sideways or falling on the workers, are stretched tightly from their anchor points. Other men are sitting on the timbers already in place, waiting to connect the tenons into the mortises as the wall is raised into the proper position.

This dangerous and heavy work would be done by about 50 men.

"It usually took an afternoon, no more than a day. But they would have everything measured and cut, and all laid out ahead of time," Harry explained.

Harry's model barn is 54 by 30 inches, built to the scale of a barn his family bought on Goyeau Street at Dougall in Windsor, at the time the area was giving way to residential development. They tore it down and moved it to the farm on the Essex Townline in Sandwich South Township, in 1921. It was Harry's during the years he farmed.

He is retired now and living in Essex. A picture of the barn-raising prompted him to build the scale model.

"I'm up there on one of those beams some place in the picture," he said.

He started the project in the fall of 1976 and recently completed it. But he worked only during the warmer months because it was made in his garage.

Barn-raising such as the one Harry has recreated became a thing of the past about 50 years ago. But the skill and hard work in the construction, the co-operation of the farm community, the ingenious methods of handling the huge beams, shouldn't be forgotten.

K-DAY — Ministry of transportation worker Doug Pettypiece bolts up a kilometre-per-hour sign on Highway 401. The new 401 speed limit, 100 kilometres an hour, is the equivalent of 62.5 m.p.h.

May the mile rest in peace

By JAMES ELLIOTT

The mile, well-known measure of length, died Tuesday in Canada after a short illness at the age of more than 2,000.

Long a common standard of measure in the English-speaking world, the mile is being replaced by kilometres on the nation's roads.

Born in Rome in pre-Christian times, the mile was originally 1,000 paces, marked out by the Legions of Rome.

It enjoyed a long and useful career as the largest unit of measurement and was used extensively in land and air travel.

The demise of the 1,760-yard unit was ordained in the early 1970s when the federal government declared a wholesale switch to metric measurement.

The milestone in speed measurement began early Tuesday morning as highway crews in most of the country began slapping up 100-kilometres-per-hour (km p.h.) stickers over the old 60-miles-per-hour designations and 80 km.p.h. over 50 m.p.h.

The new maximum limit is actually the equivalent of 62.5 miles per hour.

The old 30 m.p.h. signs in the cities and built-up areas are being replaced with 50 km.p.h. markings.

Between Windsor and Chatham, 16 two-man crews will be busy all this week pasting up the new speed limit stickers on provincial roads. Each crew has about 100 signs to convert.

In Windsor, municipal workers are in the process of converting about 300 signs.

The new metric speed limit joins metric distance signs which have been gradually phased in over the past few years.

As of Sept. 1, the odometers of all new cars sold in Canada were required to be calibrated in kilometres and the new models for 1978 will feature speedometers in kilometres with mileage as a secondary feature.

The next major metric change affecting motorists will come in January, 1979, when gas pumps switch over to litres from gallons and consumption will be rated on litres per 100 kilometres.

The shift to metric measure is expected to be completed by 1980.

Big Brothers: A home for necessity

By Sandra Mulatti THE WINDSOR STAR
Star Staff Reporter SEPT. 3, 1983

If necessity is the mother of invention, then Big Brothers of Windsor are part of the same family.

The "invention" was born more than 70 years ago in Cincinnati, Ohio to provide a necessity most of us take for granted — a father.

Since then, the agency has been providing father-absent boys between the ages of seven and 16 with a chance to establish relationships with men.

Locally, it started in 1965 when Pierre Phillippe, then a member of the St. Vincent De Paul Society, heard an announcement on his car radio about the Big Brothers Association in Flint, Mich. Suddenly, Phillippe had an idea — an idea that has led over 2,000 Windsor men to be involved with the Big Brothers Association of Windsor and has nearly 2,000 Windsor boys someone to look up to.

WITH THE AID of other concerned Windsor men, Phillippe helped establish the Big Brothers Association of Windsor — a non-profit organization — in 1969.

And thanks to Phillippe and his friends, Big Brothers is still going strong today.

The agency has become one of the largest of the 41 members under the umbrella of the United Way of Windsor and Essex County.

With more than $125,000 from the United Way, the agency assists several hundred young boys each year.

"We think they do a good job," says Dan Spinner, United Way executive director.

"We consider their work not only a direct service but preventive work as well.

"It's a critical service, one that shores up the family."

USUALLY LITTLE brothers are referred to the agency by their mothers who are concerned about a child growing up without a father. The prospective little brother fills out an application outlining interests, hobbies, likes and dislikes. Then his name is placed on a waiting list in the hope that within a year he'll be matched to a big brother with similar interests.

Big Brothers shine next week

THE WINDSOR STAR, JANUARY 3, 1970

While the Christmas spirit is still in Windsor, a local organization has begun a search for "Big Brothers" who will spare a few hours a week to spend with the area's fatherless boys.

The aim of the Big Brother group is to offer youngsters counsel and guidance.

Many of the needy youngsters are without the influence of a father, because of death, divorce, illness or imprisonment.

Windsor's new Mayor Frank

Wansbrough backs the organization fully and plans to give it his boost by declaring next week in Windsor, Big Brother Week.

"The need for volunteers is great," the mayor said. "The waiting list of Little Brothers is long. Their future depends on the number of Big Brothers recruited next week. I hope the citizens of Windsor will respond as they have in the past to the call for volunteers."

The Windsor chapter Big

Brother president Frank Roberts calls the program "a unique child welfare service which combines the friendship of a volunteer, aided by a social worker, to help a boy who needs the guidance of a father."

"The continued success of the one-man-one-boy relationship depends on the number of volunteers we recruit," Mr. Roberts said. He said men wishing to volunteer may call him at the Big Brother headquarters, 121 Wyandotte St. W.

Big Brother executive selected

JAN. 26,
1970

Frank W. Roberts has been named president of the board of directors of Big Brothers Association of Windsor for 1970-1971.

Mr. Roberts succeeds Pierre Phillippe, of Oldcastle. Dale Atkinson has been named vice-president, Larry McLachlan, treasurer, and Gil Percy, secretary.

Committee chairmen include: Don Larkin, activities; Bob Speroni and Phil Alexander, constitutional; Bill Keech, finance; Ivan Thrasher of Oldcastle, long range planning; Leo Morningstar and Ullé Mailloux, membership, and Ray Robinson, publicity.

The executive director is Paul Schiller, Theresa Lapiere is the office secretary.

PIERRE PHILIPPE, of Oldcastle, the inventor of a process which recycles sewage sludge and garbage into fertile soil, has won the first Pioneer Award, ever presented by the Recycling Council of Ontario, for outstanding contribution to the development of recycling.

An awards banquet was held recently in Burlington. The Council recognized the Oldcastle entrepreneur for his "innovation and leadership . . . in the development of recycling." Philippe, president of Grow Rich Organic Fertilizers Ltd., spent most of his life perfecting the process of converting organic waste. Much of the waste and sewage processed in the Oldcastle plant, is provided by Little River sewage treatment plant. The compost mixture he produces through recycling, he sells in bulk to gardeners and greenhouse growers, and in bags to retail outlets.

Grow Rich recently opened a composting facility in the Niagara Falls area which will process 200 tons per day of paper sludge.

THE WINDSOR STAR, JUNE 5, 1976

Windsor currently just buries its garbage but an experiment this fall could determine whether the scrap from the city's kitchens can be put to a better use.

City Council will be asked Monday to endorse a pilot project to find out whether garbage and sewage sludge can be combined to produce compost material.

The regular council meeting begins 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

The proposal, made by Pierre Phillippe of Grow Rich Organic Fertilizers Ltd. calls for the mixture of sewage sludge with municipal garbage in a three to four month experiment.

The project, backed by a $10,000 grant from the Ministry of the Environment, has been described by an official of the ministry as "very similar to the back-yard composting which...many Windsor residents utilize."

The site chosen is the former Malden Road landfill, currently used only for the dumping of inert materials. The cost to the city for the project is said to be minimal, involving only the loan of snow fencing and some levelling work to be done.

Officials of the environment ministry told the city "no problems of either nuisance or pollution are anticipated, though the operation will be monitored... and immediately terminated if unexpected problems should arise."

Grow Rich has been successful at making compost by mixing sewage sludge with sawdust and marketing it but the new project calls for garbage to be mixed in as well.

The garbage would be delivered by the city to the site and then sorted by Grow Rich to remove the non-compostable elements. It would be mixed with the sludge and then left in rows to mature. The rows would be turned at intervals.

About 50 tons of garbage and 50 tons of sewage would be used and Mr. Phillippe would be able to sell the product, or if unsuccessful, spread it on the site as cover material.

In a related proposal, council will be asked to also consider the dumping of more sewage sludge in the landfill site by Don Hearn and Sons Ltd., which has the hauling contract to dispose of sludge from the West Windsor Sewage Treatment Plant.

The public works department feels the sludge can be mixed with clay to be used as topsoil for the landfill site which has been designated to become a future park.

The Ministry of the Environment would have to hold a public hearing to consider the dumping plans before the plan could go ahead.

Mr. Hearn has told the city he will meet all regulations on dumping set by the province and he assures that no odors will come from the project.

The dumping would take place annually between April and November when the sewage treatment plant is producing about 750 tons of a sludge a week.

About 20 other business items are to be dealt with by council including a report that more delays have hit the timetable for construction of the E. C. Row Expressway.

The Canadian Transport Commission hasn't yet given permission for construction of a railway overpass on the C and O tracks, east of Walker Road, so the Ministry of Transport and Communications is now proposing a smaller call for tenders for construction.

Under the new proposal, the contract would include construction from Marentette Avenue to Walker Road including the foundations of the Walker overpass.

Philippe elected head of St. Vincent de Paul

THE WINDSOR STAR, JULY 10, 1975

Pierre Phillippe has been elected president of the St. Vincent de Paul Society for a five-year term.

Mr. Phillippe is president of Grow Rich Organic Fertilizers Ltd.

Also elected recently were: Pete Goudreau, vice-president; John Fellows, in charge of public relations; Emmett Guiry, education-Pat Rondot, youth; Bob Steffes, world food day; James McGibbon, summer camp; and Pat Zichey, prison visitations.

PIERRE PHILIPPE

10th ANNIVERSARY

We're young, but we're growing all the time. Ten years ago, Mr. Pierre Phillippe founded the Big Brother agency in Windsor. Pierre recognized a need for Big Brothers in Essex County and he set about organizing the framework of what Big Brothers is today.

In ten years, the agency has matched close to 1,000 fatherless boys. During these ten years, it is estimated that 1/2 million volunteer hours have been contributed. Ten years of service, a lifetime of results.

Such work should continue. Presently, there are 92 fatherless boys on the waiting list. Can you spare four hours a week for one year for such a boy? We need you now.

A Big Brother is someone who cares

THE WINDSOR STAR, JUNE 25, 1970

A Big Brother is: "Someone to look forward to", "Someone who cares", "A God-send". He's "Something special" for a lonely little boy without a father.

Four Windsor mothers, whose sons have big brothers, write:

"Having someone to look forward to has filled a great need for . . . It has taken away the lonely feeling he used to have."

"A big brother is a God-send. You have no idea how much it means just to have this one person who shows concern and interest in a lonely boy. I thank you for your great help and service."

"...has someone special to look forward to, to being with. Also someone who cares about him so it makes him feel more secure. He laughs more and is trying not to be rude or moody.

"My son's whole attitude has changed."

These four mothers, and 135 others in Windsor, were faced with the task of raising a son without a father to provide the male influence that means so much to a growing boy, until a big brother stepped in.

But the Big Brothers' Association of Greater Windsor, the fourth largest in Canada, is in trouble — there are 50 boys waiting and no big brothers who have volunteered to be their friends.

Big Brother officials are trying to recruit more men for the organization. Without volunteers the organization cannot fulfill its objectives.

Big Brothers are volunteers who befriend a fatherless boy between the ages of 8 and 15. They do many of the things a father would normally do with his own son, but as a friend rather than a father.

They provide the male guidance and counselling that a mother alone cannot.

The qualifications for being a Big Brother are that you must be 21, able to spend time with the boy at least once every two weeks, and able to maintain a relationship for about two years.

Big Brothers are matched with a little brother on the basis of mutual interests. Executive-director Paul Schiller said about 80 per cent of the matches are successful from the start. The others are counselled by the office staff, and sometimes new matches are made, he said.

The organization is not a service club in the traditional sense. There are no membership dues or initiation fees and no regular meetings to attend. There are, however, regular outings for big and little brothers, organized and partly financed by the association.

The association also sends out regular lists of suggestions to members along with the names of entertainment centres where members receive free or reduced admission.

Big Brothers' impact on a community is impossible to measure, but one mother wrote to the association saying that because someone cared, her son's schoolwork improved, he gained self-assurance and happiness, and for the first time he began to have some pride in himself as an individual.

The association began in Canada in Toronto 56 years ago. It grew slowly at first, but during the past two years has expanded from 10 to 55 chapters across Canada.

In Windsor, the association is six years old, and has been financed by the community fund for the past two-and-a-half years.

Anyone interested in learning more about Big Brothers is invited to attend the annual barbecue this Sunday at the farm of Pierre Phillippe, founder of Big Brothers in Windsor.

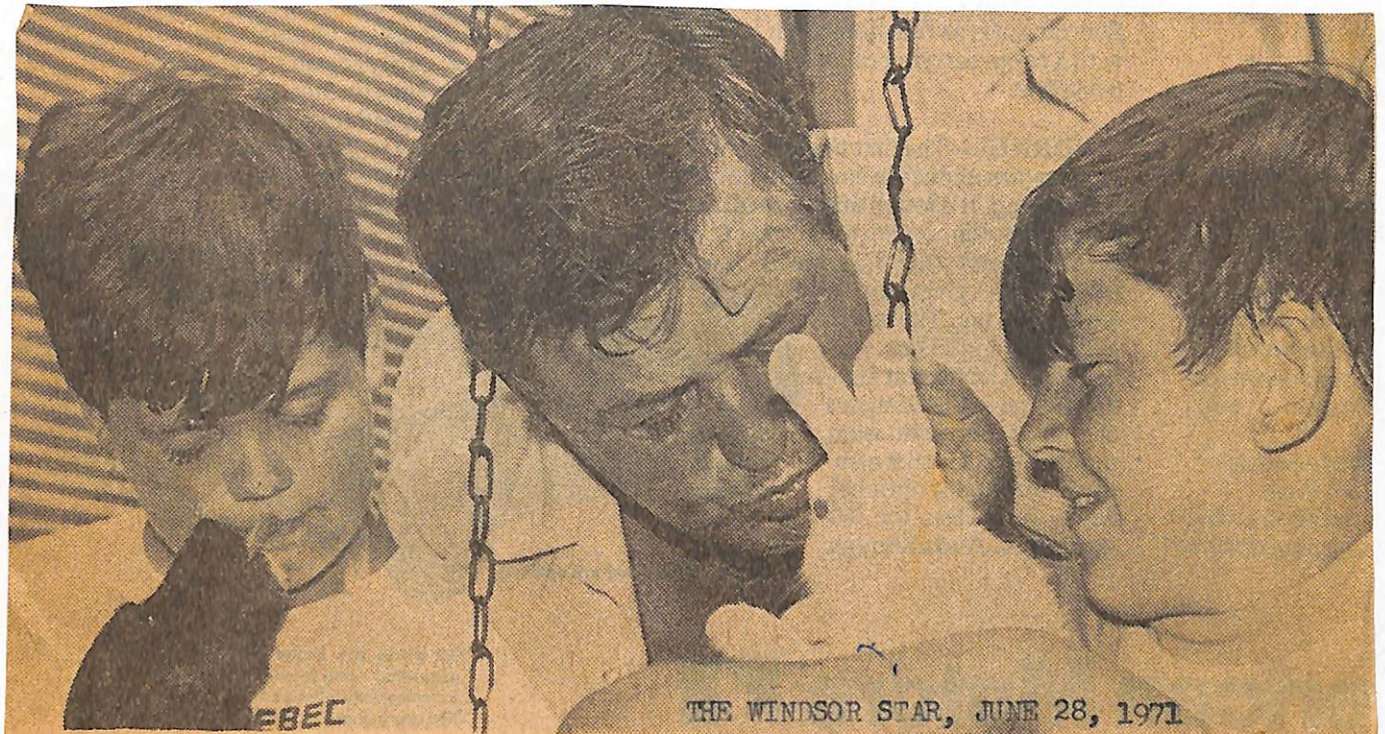

A roast beef dinner will be provided by the association for families and friends of association members and those interested in the organization. Bring only your own refreshments.

To find out about joining Big Brothers and for more details on the barbecue, call Paul Schiller, executive director of the Big Brothers Association of Greater Windsor, at the office, 121 Wyandotte St. W., 254-0954.

Honor First Big Brother

Big Brothers of Windsor and Essex County for the first time in their 20 year history will be honouring "a 20 year" Big Brother (Max Eve) as well as his former Little Brother Mike Gagnier who has been a Big Brother for three years!

This "first time happening" will take place at the organization's annual meeting at the Hiram Walker Reception Centre on Thursday, June 18, 7 p.m.

Neil Fotheringham and Ulie Mailloux, will also receive 20 year awards. The founder of Big Brothers of Windsor-Essex County, Pierre Philippe will be in attendance to present these 20 year awards.

At this year's annual meeting other awards will be presented which include men who have served as Big Brothers for 3 and 10 years. Various groups and individuals will also be honoured for their generous support of Big Brothers over the past year.

A bursary will be presented to a worthy Little Brother as well, in memory of a former Big Brother and Board President, Frank Roberts. This bursary will aid the recipient in the furtherance of his post secondary education.

Presently there are still over 80 father-absent boys waiting for a Big Brother.

GUN SAFETY—The Big Brothers of Windsor and their little brothers joined hands last weekend at the Windsor Sportsmen's Club and took a quick course in safe gun handling. The course was part of an all day program of outdoor activity sponsored by the Willanbar Sportsmen's Club. The safe gun handling course was put on by the instructors of the Windsor Sportsmen's Club. Members of the Windsor Fire Department clown team also took part in making the day a memorable one for the youngsters. From left are Marlon Scott, 14; Michael Rocheleau, 8; Pierre Philippe, president of the Big Brothers Club; Guy Peters, instructor, and Ed Shuttleworth, president of the Willanbar club. Paul Schiller has a problem.

His organization is getting too much good publicity.

Most groups in this city would love to be in his shoes.

But it's backfiring on Mr. Schiller, who is the executive director of the Big Brothers in Windsor.

You see the difficulty is this: the more publicity his organization receives, the more social agencies and mothers of fatherless boys get in touch with him to find Big Brothers.

And the gap between the number of boys who need an older male companion and the number of men willing to do so continues to widen.

"We've got 108 boys on our waiting-list right now, and that's the highest we've ever had... We've got to have volunteers," Mr. Schiller says. There are now 218 Big Brothers paired with little brothers.

"It's like everytime people read about what we're doing, we get two little brothers for each volunteer. It used to be you could almost guarantee a boy he'd have a Big Brother within three months. Now, it could be six months, or even a year.

"We estimate that there are about 1,500 to 2,000 boys in Essex County who could benefit from the Big Brothers. Yet if we went out and actively looked around for kids to help, we'd probably have more than 1,000 boys on our waiting-list," Mr. Schiller says.

And here's where you might come in.

If you're a guy who likes kids, and wouldn't mind spending a little time June 24 at a huge barbecue (it attracted 500 people last year) on Pierre Philippe's farm on Highway 3 between Howard Ave. and Walker Rd. Mr. Schiller is wondering if you would escort one of those 108 boys on the waiting-list to the bash that day.

Mr. Philippe, the founder of the Windsor Big Brothers, puts on a great spread. He uses an unusual kind of barbecue cooking style—he cooks 500 pounds of beef in the ground but the culinary results, from past experience, justify the method completely.

You don't have to commit yourself or your time beyond the day of the barbecue, Mr. Schiller says.

But some of you just might want to stick around a little while afterwards and learn a little more about the Big Brothers.

A lot of potential volunteers are under the impression that you have to spend long weekends with your little brother, or take him out to hockey games every night.

Not so, according to Mr. Schiller.

It takes about four hours a week of your time, and "that's it."

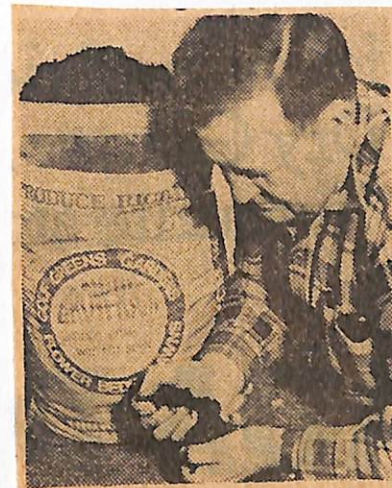

Another thing about the organization is that it isn't centred only in the Windsor area.

Of the 108 boys on the present waiting-list, 28 are from the county, from places like Ruthven, Leamington, Amherstburg, Kingsville, and Belle River.

What's the point of Big Brothers anyway?

Helping and loving sums it up.

As Mr. Schiller says, "the number of fatherless boys who get into trouble is much higher statistically than for kids with fathers."

BIG BROTHERS — Rain dampened a lot of things at the Big Brothers' sixth annual beef barbecue Sunday, but not the enthusiasm and appetites of the 500 people who turned out. Digging in, literally, chef Pierre Philippe, (centre in white) removes beef from barbecue pit. Mr. Philippe, host for the party, cooked 420 pounds of prime beef in the ground 24 hours.

Society launches drive to send meals overseas

Thousands of starving people in Africa and Asia will be given the strength to continue living a while longer if the Saint Vincent de Paul Society's World Food Day is a success.

The society, which announced the drive at a Wednesday luncheon at Holy Redeemer College on Cousineau Road, is asking the people of Essex County to sacrifice one meal on Dec. 19 and donate the cost of that meal to a food fund.

The goal is to collect enough money for 300,000 meals, an average of about one meal per person in the county.

The money, which can be donated at any of the county's chartered banks, will be sent, in the form of food, to the drought-stricken Sahel region of north-central Africa and the flooded and over-populated country of Bangladesh.

Clarence Ouellette, executive-assistant to Mayor Frank Wansbrough, said City Council will proclaim Dec. 19 World Food Day during the regular council meeting on Monday, Dec. 9.

"Everyone in the city and the county is needed to help in this effort," said Pierre Philippe, chairman of World Food Day, at the luncheon.

"The main thing is to get the message across," he said. "There are thousands of people going hungry."

The money will be channeled through the Canadian Catholic Organization for Development and Peace (CCODP), but the drive is completely non-denominational, said Mr. Philippe.

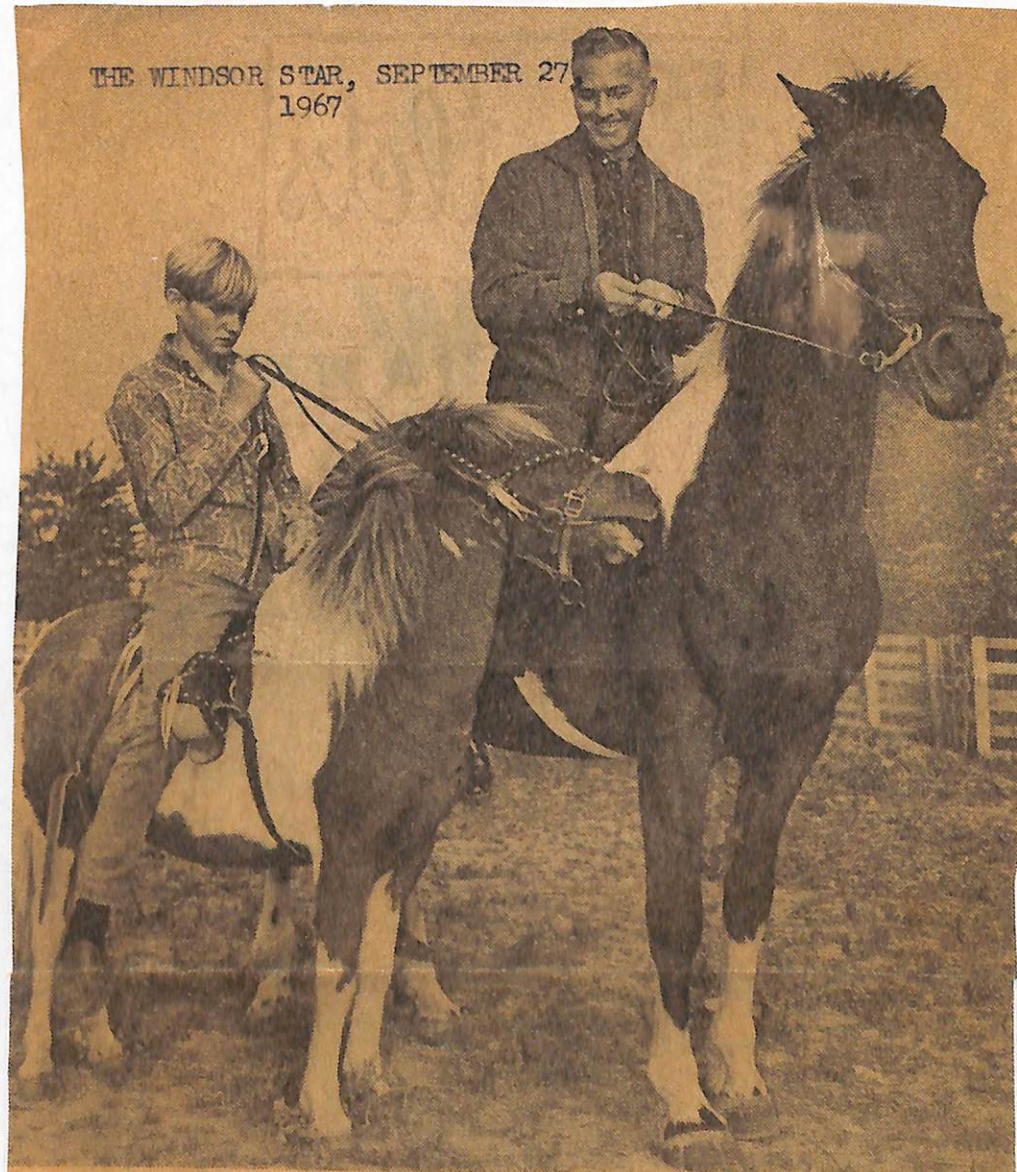

The CCODP is involved, he said, because the Canadian government gives one dollar for each one that is donated for most of the organization's projects.

We will see that there is some affirmation of where the money has gone and what it is doing, he said, to assure that it is not wasted.

He also said he hoped this was only the beginning of a World Food Day which would eventually stretch across Canada and the world.

But, he added, this year's drive in Essex County will not adversely affect the society's regular charitable services to the area's needy.

Little kitchen meet gets big...brothers!

By PAUL VASEY

One day when Pierre Phillippe was just a little gaffer — and this takes us back a bit of course — dad sat him down and told him a sad story.

It was the story of how his own father had died, leaving Pierre's father eventually, in a home with a stepfather who didn't care much for him.

It was the story of how Pierre's father wound up, later, as the hero of sorts in a Cinderella story where the cousins went off to school and to play while he became a shepherd on his uncle's farm.

And like the other Cinderella story, this one turned out all right.

Pierre's father made it through those years and grew up and got married and had some kids of his own.

And somewhere, in all the thinking he did about that "bleeding feeling inside" which is knowing that you didn't have a dad, became determined to be the best of all possible dads.

He succeeded, of course.

But that's only part of the reason this story is being written.

Another part of the reason is that later, when Pierre was in his 20s, he walked right into another sad little story.

His wife and her three brothers, when they were very young, had been orphaned.

Pierre got to thinking, after the honeymoon, about those three little boys — aged six, 10 and 12 — in an orphanage. The more he got to thinking about them, the more he thought how sad it was.

He talked to his wife of an idea which had come to him. She thought it a fine idea. He talked to the nun in charge of the orphanage and she thought it a fine idea.

And so it came to be, back in 1935, that Pierre Phillippe's three young brothers-in-law came to live on the farm on his Isle of Jersey in the British Channel.

But that's only another part of the reason this story is being written.

Another part of the reason is that about 10 or 11 years after Pierre Phillippe became a big brother to his little brothers-in-law, the world's second great war had wound down to its end.

A lot of men who had been soldiers in the French army, like Pierre, weren't as lucky as he. Sick and injured, many could no longer provide all the good things in life for their own sons.

The more Pierre got to thinking about the sons of all those soldiers, the more he thought how sad it all was.

He talked to his wife about an idea which had come to him. She thought it a fine idea. He talked to some officials in Paris and they thought so too.

And so it came to be — in the summer of '46 — that 28 little kids came out to the Isle of Jersey to move in with Pierre and the other farmers and their wives and spend a summer holiday they otherwise would never have had.

And that brings us around to the final reason this story is being written.

Quite a bit later — when Pierre was thinking about those stories — another idea came to him.

He called five men — Al Quenneville, John Conlin, Ed St. Antoine, Louis Docherty and Louis Parent — to his farmhouse out on Highway 3 and there, around the kitchen table, told them of his plans to start an organization of men who would befriend fatherless boys.

"Well, some said we should have some more meetings.

"I said to hell with that.

"If it goes bad, we'll remedy it.

"If it's good, we're off to the races."

And that, you see, was that.

Ten dollars got thrown on the table and "that $10 got us going."

Mike Healey, a social worker then employed with the Windsor probation service, volunteered his services and fed to the group the names of fatherless boys he thought would benefit from a one-to-one relationship with a man.

After a few months, Pierre Phillippe knew that, unless the group got some money, it wouldn't survive.

"So I went to see the mayor and said we needed some money. To pay for a social worker, you know. And he said 'Okay, we'll give you a day'."

That first Big Brothers day — in January of '67 — it was 12 below zero.

Pierre Phillippe, as big, burly and accustomed to the cold as he was, just got tired of standing about on the street corner with his tin can.

"So I got into my car and I covered

A SPECIAL TOAST — Ten years ago, Pierre Phillippe and some friends sat around in his the kitchen of his farm house and decided to start an organization to help fatherless boys. Soon afterward, Pierre became a big all the hotels I could find. Man, we got money!"

About $1,600 when all the cans had been opened in Pierre's kitchen and the change counted and rolled.

The next year, the Big Brothers day campaign brought in about $2,200 and the following year, about $4,400.

By that time, the organization had grown from country-kitchen size to 57 men and 57 boys.

And it had overcome a little opposition along the way.

Two and a half years out, Pierre's group discovered that "a group of pretty sophisticated people — lawyers and that — wanted to start a Big Brothers organization too.

"They weren't organized or anything. They'd had some meetings. That's all."

They were, however, well-connected as well as sophisticated brother to Tom Witty. Although Tom is now married and a father, he still is part of the Phillippe family and this week, he and Pierre got together to drink a toast to the 10th anniversary of the Big Brothers Association.

and, the next thing Pierre Phillippe knew, a meeting had been called to determine whether Pierre's group or the "sophisticated" folks would be the official Big Brothers group in Windsor.

"Well, I called all the boys and we packed the room.

"They were only four.

"We'd had a tag day — twice by then — and it was rollin We had applied for a charter (from the national organization) and we had an affiliation with the Hamilton group."

The man presiding over the meeting listened to all that then asked the group of four what they'd done. "They said, well, we're going to have another meeting."

The matter was settled then and there.

Big Brother moving on

By Lee Palser/Star Staff Reporter

The Big Brothers are losing their big brother. Pierre Phillippe, who founded the Big Brothers of Windsor-Essex County in 1966, is moving to Niagara Falls to continue his fertilizer business. But he's leaving behind a legacy with hundreds of Windsor youths.

The organization he started nearly two decades ago is thriving, moving rapidly toward its goal of 300 "matches" of boys with adults, said Tim Halford, Big Brothers' spokesman during their annual Christmas party Wednesday.

Although there are still more than 100 boys on a waiting list, Halford said, there are now 215 matches across the area.

"Oh, this has definitely been a good year for us, no question," he said. "The waiting list has decreased a little bit, but we still want to increase the number of matches, to bring it up to that 300 mark. We think that's achievable — something good to strive for."

In fact, the Windsor-Essex County Big Brothers are the largest per capita anywhere, he believes, far surpassing Toronto which has only 600 matches for the entire population.

He attributes the local response to "something about Windsor and Essex County" that makes the area generous with both time and money.

"I was talking to someone involved in London's United Way and he was quite pleased that they reached their goal of about $3.5 million," Halford said. "With about 80,000 fewer people here, we raised $6 million. That says something very positive about this area."

HE SAID PHILLIPPE is the best example of what he's talking about. He's had 11 little brothers over the years since he founded what he then believed was the first organization of its kind in Canada.

Now 73, Phillippe has already said he will continue his involvement in the organization in Niagara Falls.

"He has kept us going over the years," Halford said. "He's shown you can be a big brother even at 73. He's leaving us, but he's not — his spirit will be around a long time."

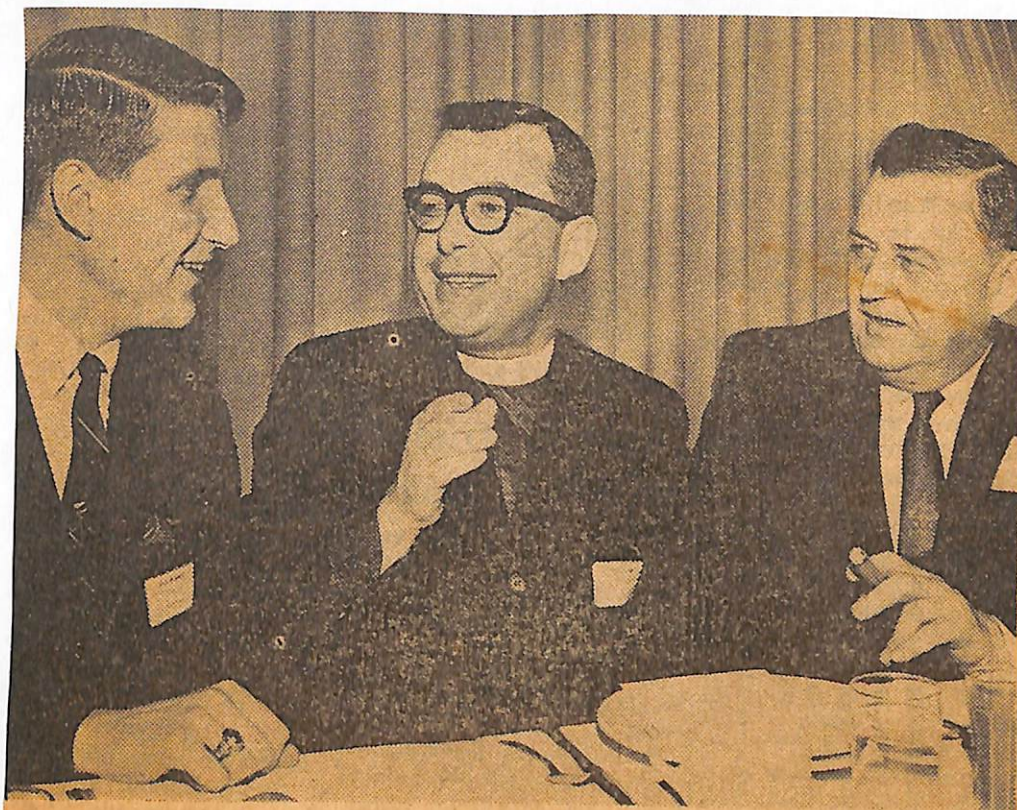

Big Brothers has seven full-time and scores of part-time staff and volunteers, including Sheryle Wigle, the organization's events co-ordinator. Wigle said she became involved what seems "a long time ago" as a volunteer when office help was needed and has since been made an honorary Big Brother.

"It's been the experience of my life," she said. "These are good kids and it's a great pleasure watching them grow up. We have several women involved now and I think that's the way it should be."

Phillippe — who maintains he'll never retire from either business or being a Big Brother — said he founded the organization on a principle. His father — whom he calls "the most wonderful father anyone could have" — was an orphan. History was repeated when one of Phillippe's grandsons became an orphan as well.

It was then he decided to do something to pass along the rich inheritance he received from his father in the best way he could — by founding Big Brothers.

"IT MAKES THE Big Brother a better person, I think," Phillippe said. "To look after a child not of his own blood, he has to be very careful to show a good example. He has to understand that the child is watching every move he makes like a hawk to learn how to react and respond."

Big Brothers praised Government aid said needed by movement

The Big Brother Association "is one of the most important and one of the least recognized organizations in society," Rev. T. Neil Libby said Friday.

The director of St. Leonard's House, spoke at a Windsor Big Brother banquet in the Princeton Motel.

"Society talks about the problems of youth out of one side of its mouth but offers no constructive thoughts to balance criticism," Fr. Libby said in an interview.

He said government should subsidize Big Brother volunteers at least for their out-of-pocket expenses.

Noting the shortage of men willing to provide adult companionship and guidance to fatherless youths, he said people want prevention (of juvenile delinquency) but don't want to get personally involved.

To be a Big Brother it takes a bit of idealism and a bit of realism, backed up by a high degree of tolerance, he added.

"It makes him a better man."

The annual Christmas dinner and party was sponsored for the fifth time by the Riverside Knights of Columbus and featured a magic show by Jonathan T. Wizard and a visit from Santa Claus — played, appropriately, by Phillippe.

The Riverside Council not only footed all the bills for the dinner, hall rental and gifts for every boy, but also even supplied 25 temporary Big Brothers so some of the youngsters on the waiting list had a chance to attend.

Halford said the waiting list proves there is still a need for more volunteers, noting that some former Little Brothers are now grown and are offering to help. He expects the numbers to increase, but stressed the need for more adults to get involved.

Grow-Rich outgrows local market

OLDCASTLE — It sounds like a logical practice — returning to the soil what was taken away during food production.

Instead, most municipalities prefer to bury their garbage and sewage in increasingly-scarce landfill sites. It's a practice the Ontario government is beginning to discourage as a poor choice behind incineration or composting.

And, the owners of a locally-formed company believe composting is the obvious choice because it can turn garbage and sewage into organic matter capable of enhancing soil.

"We have been, in a sense, raping our agricultural land and we haven't been replenishing it," says Carl Glos, who along with his brother, Jerry, and Pierre Philippe, have formed Grow-Rich Waste Recycling Systems Inc.

"WHAT WE are promoting is putting back into the soil what we have taken out of the soil."

Composting, says Philippe, can lead to reduced soil erosion by putting humus back in soils and less water pollution by finding a new use for waste that is either dumped directly into waterways or leaches its way through soils.

The 73-year-old Philippe has been working with soils most of his life as a farmer and landscaper and formed Grow-Rich Organic Fertilizers Ltd. 20 years ago. The company takes sludge from Windsor's Little River sewage treatment plant, inoculates it with a bacterial "catalyst" to break it down, and in 90 days has a product that can be sold as an organic fertilizer and soil amender. Philippe was granted a patent for the process in 1979.

BY YEAR'S END, however, Philippe will be moving his family and company from its Highway 3 location to Niagara Falls where Grow-Rich Waste Recycling Systems opened a plant in August.

The Niagara Falls plant uses sludge from a paper recycling operation instead of sewage to produce its Grow-Rich product. Another product, such as chicken manure or grape humus, is also added to provide nutrients.

The new location was picked, the partners say, to put them closest to their customers.

While local gardeners flock to Philippe's farm in the spring and he has several greenhouse operators as customers in the Leamington area, he says he can't keep up to customer demands in the Niagara-Toronto area. "We haven't even scratched the surface and I have to refuse a lot of people's orders."

PHILIPPE TRIED expanding at his current location but Sandwich South Township council wouldn't allow it.

Township officials and some residents, in fact, will be glad to see Grow-Rich move on.

Clerk Evelyn Oliver says people have complained for years about the operation's odors. "When he's hauling in the sludge, that's when we have a problem."

Complaints to the Environment Ministry were for naught, says Oliver, and strengthening the township's nuisance bylaw might have put some hog farmers out of business.

Philippe says he wasn't fazed by the complaints, but notes the Niagara regional government went out of its way to help the new company find a location.

THE PARTNERS are excited about the future of their new operation, which was built on a 64-acre site and can produce 150,000 cubic yards of Grow-Rich annually.

"We want to do some research there on solid waste and other organic waste," says Glos. "We have plenty of land on which to expand."

The company also has had contact with officials in several Third World countries who are interested in using the Grow-Rich process as an answer to their many problems with pollution and soil degradation.

IN MOST COUNTRIES, says Philippe, the Canadian Export Development Agency would actually pay for such projects.

Estimating the cost at $150,000, he says the price tag would include a licence to use the process and employee training.

Philippe has already travelled extensively to interested countries and says they are badly in need of better waste and soil management systems.

"We could solve a lot of their problems . . . we could solve the garbage and sewage problems and erosion caused by a lack of humus."

OWNERS OF Canada's 83 paper mills are also interested in the Grow-Rich process, says Glos, because they face an expensive and growing problem with waste disposal. They're now paying about $13 per ton for disposal and Glos says his company would charge half that amount to remove the waste and transport it to Niagara Falls.

The partners also expect product demand to grow as governments recognize the need to save soils and handle waste more effectively.

"Governments have to realize the benefits of using a product like Grow-Rich on agricultural land and encourage farmers to use it on the land either through tax relief or some incentive."

FARMERS, HE says, tend to be concerned with yearly production rather than the longterm benefits of good soil management. Studies have shown, however, that soil degradation is the number one problem facing agriculture today.

Soil enhancing products will also become more important, he says, as the country's most productive lands are gobbled up by urban development. Such products, he adds, can be added to lower quality soils, like those used for tobacco, to make them compatible with other crops.

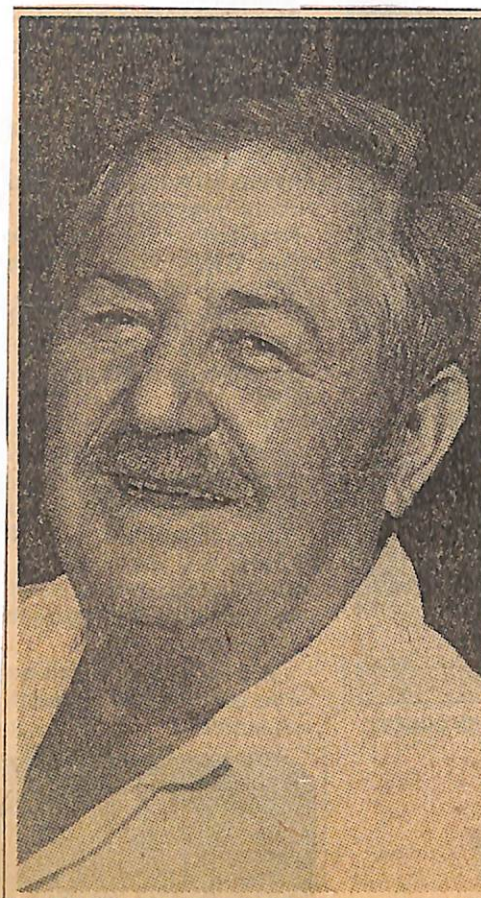

"It's a matter of government deciding what benefit there is to the agricultural community and the country as a whole."

Nigerians may buy process from area man

The Nigerian government is seriously considering adopting on a large scale an organic fertilizer process from Oldcastle businessman Pierre Philippe.

Philippe returned from Nigeria Nov. 5 after a 10-day visit with Detroit-area consultant Benjamin Wilcox — a Nigerian native — and said he will supply details of cost and types of machinery to set up 20 organic fertilizer sites in that country.

He said Nigeria is considering investing up to $90 million to build the sites, which would turn livestock, human and many other types of garbage and waste into compost for fertilizer to build up the country's poor soil.

Philippe would sell a $20-million franchise to Nigeria to operate 20 sites, or individual franchises for $100,000 each. If the full proposal is accepted, Philippe would also collect royalties of up to $1 million per year for 10 years. After that, the process would revert entirely to Nigerian control.

Philippe, who owns and operates Grow-Rich Organic Fertilizers Ltd., said if Nigeria accepts, his proposal could be ready for operation sometime in 1981.

THE PROPOSAL would benefit the Nigerians two ways, he said. Not only would they eliminate a large waste problem in major cities and from livestock farms, but they would produce fertilizer which would be less expensive in the long run than buying commercial fertilizers at world prices.

"The cities are a mess, there's garbage everywhere. They've neglected the soil. If you use organic matter over a period of years, you're ahead of commercial fertilizers.

"Composting is less costly than buying fertilizer. They do two things at once — they clean up the environment and they produce fertilizer. If we get it going it's going to be fantastic. We have as good a chance as anybody," Philippe said.

BROTHERS—The Big Brothers Association of Greater Windsor is one of two new agencies in the United Fund this year. Its aim is to assist fatherless boys by providing friendship, understanding, example and guidance through Big Brothers. This pair of Big and Little Brothers is just one of the 83 now in the Windsor organization.

Helping hand for Paul

Big Brother stands in for dad

Editor's Note — The Big Brothers Association of Greater Windsor is one of two new agencies in the United Fund this year. The following is the second in a series of articles on the United Fund agencies which will appear in The Star during the $1,045,000 campaign which starts Oct. 15.

By HELEN ROSS

Fourteen-year-old Paul's father just "took off" one day, leaving his mother to bring up six children.

When he was 11, he was involved in a breaking and entering incident, which ended in his older brother being sent to prison and Paul placed on probation.

But four months ago Paul found himself a "big brother" to help fill the gap left by his father's departure.

His new friend is Joseph Speed, of RR1 Oldcastle who first heard about the Big Brothers Association when it was formed in Windsor in 1966.

Mr. Speed liked the association's objective of providing friendship, understanding, example and guidance to fatherless boys. But it was not until last year that he felt he had time to be Big Brother.

"I thought maybe I could help in some small way," he said.

So he went for an interview with the association's social worker and was paired with Paul four months ago.

Prospective Big Brothers are screened when the volunteer to make sure they meet the standards of the organization. They should be stable, independent and mature although not necessarily over 21.

Paul met the basic requirement for Little Brothers being a boy between eight and 18 without a father. Little Brothers may be fatherless owing to death, divorce, desertion as in Paul's case, parental separation or other causes.

It was Paul's probation officer who asked him if he would like to have a Big Brother and he said yes. Now that he has one he may soon be taken off probation.

One of the goals of the Big Brother movement is to keep would-be delinquents out of the courts, although public relations officer John Deneau estimates that only about 15 per cent of the Little Brothers now in the organization are in trouble with the law.

The 83 Big Brothers now in the Windsor association come from all walks of life. They are policemen, teachers, professors, factory workers and businessmen.

Mr. Speed, who works at A. Ross Plumbing Co. Ltd., is married with an adopted child. He tries to see Paul at least once every two weeks.

This Saturday they will be going to an outing sponsored by the Willambar Sportsmen's Club which will include a safety gun handling exhibition, skeet-shooting and a trip to Jack Miner's bird sanctuary.

In past months they have gone to a baseball game and the stock-car races at Checker Flag Raceway.

They whooped it up with other Big and Little Brothers at the home of association president Pierre Philippe, RR1 Oldcastle, who held a barbecue and a corn roast during the summer.

Paul goes to Mr. Speed's farm in the evenings or on Saturdays and had a birthday party there two weeks ago.

Big Brothers meet once a month to discuss mutual problems and plans for future activities.

The Windsor association which started in 1966 under the auspices of the St. Vincent de Paul Society is now completely independent. The members received their charter in January.

They have also hired a fulltime social worker from Hamilton, David Dore, whose official title is executive director.

The association is run by a 15-man board of directors.

Phillips-Lessard Wed

On Saturday, August 14th, St. Williams Church, Emeryville, was the setting for the marriage of Barbara Jean Phillips and Leo Eugene Lessard.

Barbara is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Phillips of Maidstone and Les is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Lessard of Emeryville.

The lovely bride entered the church on the arm of her father wearing a floor length gown of sheer nylon over taffeta with inserts of chantilly lace shaping the A-line skirt. Rows of lace formed the choir boy sleeves. The chapel train with inserted lace panels finished the ensemble. The brides shoulder length veil was held by a tiara of seeded pearls. She carried a cascade of miniature yellow roses.

Mrs. Herb Henricks assisted Barbara as matron of honour. Miss Connie Phillips, sister of the bride, Mrs. Larry Laporte, sister of the groom were bridesmaids and Miss Michelle Phillips, sister of the bride was flower girl. Their gibson length gowns were identical of yellow and white lace scooped neckline puffed sleeves with empire waist line framed by yellow velvet ribbon.

The attendants carried white colonial baskets of yellow shasta daisies with streamers of avocado green velvet ribbon. Phil Lepage, cousin of the groom, was best man. John Paul Lepage and Larry Laporte were groomsmen. Robert Lemire, cousin of the groom was ring bearer. The men were attired in black tuxedos.

Laura and Linda Little sang "For Ah We Know" and "We've Only Just Begun". They were accompanied by Wayne Sylvestre organist.

The reception was held for 230 guests at the K. of C. Hall, in Riverside immediately following the ceremony.

The happy couple travelled to Northern Ontario on their honeymoon and will reside on 12th Con. Sandwich South.

Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Ron Johnson, Debbie and Todd and Mrs. Mino Ure, from Oxford, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Crew, Palm Springs, California; Mr. and Mrs. Dorsd, Ontario, California; Mrs. Emma Lessard, Cobalt; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Kerin, Grosse Point Woods; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Clark Roseville, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. DeWinter, Warren, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Vic Cerisia, Sarnia; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Collocutt, Bowmanville; Mr. and Mrs. Verne Coneybeare, Fergus; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dugas, Mount Clemens, Mich.

Phillips-Mullins

Dec 3. 1976

Before an altar banked with white gladioli and fall flowers Constance Veronica Mullins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice W. Mullins became the bride of Lloyd Charles Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melbourne L. Phillips, all of Maldstone.

The Reverend Major A.P. Marentette, Pastor of St. Mary's Church, Maldstone celebrated the double ring ceremony. Mr. Tim Hebert was organist and soloist.

The bride escorted by her father down the aisle, was radiant in a floor length gown of white nylon and lace over silk taffeta. The bodice and sleeves were studded with pearls and the long cathedral train was edged in lace. Her two tiered veil of illusion edged in lace was held to her head by a cap of lace and pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of red, pink and white roses with long lace streamer tied with fern and satin ribbons.

The bride's sister, Mary-Ellen Mullins was maid of honour. The bridesmaids were Chris Mullins, sister of the bride, Nona Mullins, sister-in-law of the bride, Cathy Poulter of Cottam and Liz Meloche of London, friends of the bride, Jane Mullins, sister of the bride was junior bridesmaid. They wore identical gowns of double knit polyester fashioned with bell sleeves and two toned sashes that tied at the waist. They wore picture hats trimmed with roses and carried baskets of autumn leaves and mixed fall flowers. The maid of honour and junior bridesmaid were in green and the bridesmaids in rust.

The groom wore a beige tuxedo and the best man and ushers wore brown tuxedos. The best man was Alan Phillips, brother of the groom. The ushers were Vic Bellaire, Tim Mullins, Doug MacKenzie, Dan McGuire, Andrew Schooley, cousin of the groom was junior usher.

A dinner reception for 420 guests was held in the Canadian Room at the Cleary Auditorium.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a silk two piece gown trimmed with braid. She wore matching accessories and a corsage of pale orange orchids.

The groom's mother chose a gown of green crepe with chiffon sleeves. She wore silver accessories and a corsage of pale green orchids.

Mrs. Ellen Mullins, grandmother of the bride wore a green and white two piece ensemble with black accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Mrs. John Schooley, grandmother of the groom was in a blue print with black accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Following a honeymoon to the Virgin Islands in the Caribbean the young couple will live in Maldstone.

Sellan-Phillips Wed . . .

Bethel United Church was the setting for a quaint candle light service when Krystal Vera Phillips and Bryan Sellan were united in marriage, on Saturday, November 20, 1976.

The double ring ceremony was solemnized by Rev. Glenn Brown. Mrs. Norma Voakes sang theme from Love Story, The Lord's Prayer and He, accompanied by Mrs. Ellen Wilson on the organ.

Krystal is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Phillips of Maldstone and Bryan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mario Sellan of Amiens St., Windsor. Bryan is a graduate of the University of Windsor with a degree in Bachelor of Applied Science and is registered as a Professional Engineer in the Province of Ontario.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father wearing a gown of lace, with fitted bodice, high neckline, full skirt, long lace sleeves complemented by a sheer illusion veil caught to a headpiece of lace matching that of her gown. Krystal's bouquet was made up of two dozen red roses with baby's breath and lace streamers. She chose as her jewellery Venetian crystal, a gift received from the future in-law's.

with many of our town guests in attendance.

Krystal chose as her going away outfit a grey and white pin striped suit complemented by rust accessories and a corsage of red roses.

After a three week honeymoon in California and Nevada, the couple will reside in Maldstone.

PHILLIPS

Mrs. Bonnie Smith (sister of the bride) was her matron of honour. Bonnie wore a floor length gown of red satin with a Juliette cap of matching fabric trimmed in red lace.

The bridesmaids were Diana Ouellette and Pam Clifford of Essex and Becky Goodburn of Whitby. They wore identical gowns and caps as the matron of honour only green satin in colour. The flower girls were Jacqueline Ouellette (daughter of Diana and Garry Ouellette, of Essex), Jeni Clifford (daughter of Pam and Murray Clifford, of Essex) and Natalie Goodburn (daughter of Becky and Dennis Goodburn, of Whitby). All flower girls were dressed in red satin with gowns styled identical to the bridesmaids. All of Krystal's attendants carried bouquets matching her own.

The groom and his attendants wore hunter green tuxedos with celery green ruffled shirts. The best man was James Sellan (brother of the groom) with John Smith of Maldstone, Pat Caron of Toronto and Tim Sellan (also a brother of the groom), acting as ushers.

The bride's mother wore a floor length gown of burgundy velvet with matching cape and chose pink roses for her corsage.

Mother of the groom chose a floor length gown of mint green with yellow roses for her corsage.

Mrs. Vera Phillips, grandmother of the bride, wore a gown of pale blue accented by a white orchid while Mrs. Ida Sellan, grandmother of the groom, wore a gown of coffee brown, also accented by a white corsage.

A dinner and reception for 200 guests followed the church ceremony at the Riverside Sportsmens Club

Father of 3 Remanded In Beating

Farmhand Accused As 17-Month-Old Daughter Assaulted

A 24-year-old father of three young children will appear in police court here next Thursday to answer a charge that he severely beat and injured his 17-month-old daughter.

Norman Phinney, of Snake Lane, Sandwich South, has been charged with assault occasioning actual bodily harm. He was remanded for plea to March 10, when he will appear before County Magistrate J. Arthur Hanrahan.

The child, Deborah Phinney, is undergoing treatment at Metropolitan Hospital.

Phinney and his 19-year-old wife are the parents of two other children, Margaret, three years, and Norman Jr., six months. The mother, police said, had little to say about the assault.

Ontario provincial police said Phinney, a farmhand, was charged after police investigated a complaint from the Children's Aid Society.

Acting on information from the society, O.P.P. Constable J. S. Beckett visited the home. He examined the child, he said, and discovered that "the baby had been beaten rather severely."

"The little girl had old bruises as well as new ones," Constable Beckett said. "The bruises covered the child's hips up to the small of the back."

The police officer said he had never seen anything like it before.

"It was beyond all reason," he said.

The father explained the bruises by saying that the child had fallen from a chesterfield.

Constable Beckett said there was very little food in the house. He said he went out and purchased a quart of milk for the six-month-old baby.

"I bought the milk because I learned that the baby had no milk for three or four days before we got there," Constable Beckett declared.

Water and red tape don't mix

By ALAN HENDERSON

About eight years ago, Walter McNeilly was verbally assured by a real estate agent that Sandwich South Township Council was contemplating a waterline past the house he was to buy in the hamlet of Maidstone.

So far, the only thing that's gone past his bungalow on Highway 3 is the traffic.

But he's a patient man and he's prepared to wait a while longer even though the debate concerning the waterline by the councils in Sandwich South and Maidstone Township has taken on all the proportions of a United Nations agreement.

In the meantime, Mr. McNeilly and many of his neighbors continue to pay up to $200 annually to have water trucked onto their properties and his wife, Claudette, continues to get family drinking water from town in a five-gallon plastic bag.

He and his family, which consisted of six children up until last year — there's three at home now — have adjusted to their dilemma which they are quick to concede is no different than hundreds of other county residents.

Sandwich South council is anxious to proceed with the project and has authorized engineers to prepare working drawings for the project.

Maidstone Township Council will hold a public meeting Thursday night at Maidstone Central School on Con. 7 and 8 sideroad to determine if residents are still interested, particularly since cost estimates for the project have risen.

Engineers from LaFontaine, Cowie, Buratto and Associates Ltd., will be on hand to explain the finances for the project and answer any questions.

If the project is endorsed, it would take about 2½ months to complete drawings and then several months of red tape before the project could be advertised and tendered.

Mr. McNeilly said because of a water shortage he and his family use about the 5,000 gallons it's estimated a family his size uses in a year.

He never washes his car and he's even reluctant to use the meagre amount of water that he does for the few plants he has at the back of his house.

"Once I used two pails of water for my raspberry plants and I really felt guilty," he said with a laugh.

Although the family bathes regularly "we don't do it every day" and "we don't throw a piece of paper in the toilet and then flush it."

Mr. McNeilly and three of his neighbors draw water from a cistern at the front of his house. About once a week during the summer months a large tanker truck — the type used to carry milk — pumps about 2,300 gallons of fresh water into the cistern at $15 a load.

Mr. McNeilly and his neighbors used to draw water from a community well but when the property was sold to local developers, the water supply was cut off.

He and his neighbors then decided to construct a cistern, which was given approval on a temporary basis, at a cost of $600.

Because it was a temporary structure until the waterline was installed, the walls of the cistern were not given a permanent seal.

Mr. McNeilly believes it is because of a drainage ditch just a few feet away that the water in the cistern cannot be used for drinking purposes unless it is boiled.

Despite the inconveniences, Mr. McNeilly and his family consider themselves fortunate that they do not have to rely on well water in the area, which has an unusually high sulphur content.

Up the street, for example, at St. Mary's Separate School, there's a strong smell that resembles rotten eggs in portions of the school near the washrooms.

MAIDSTONE CROSS.

Albert Pittman, aged 60 years, died on Thursday in Windsor. Mr. Pittman lived here years ago with his parents on the farm formerly owned by Dennis Donovan on the Malden road. Sincere sympathy to the family. One of his sisters, Alice, (Mrs. Norris Rounding) lives in Oldcastle.

MAY. 12. 1955

PIKE

For those who use the sulphur water, it's necessary to replace plumbing fixtures about every three years.

* R. H. Pike, who also lives in the hamlet, said he has been a resident for 12 years and has replaced his fixtures, which become choked with mineral deposits, about every three years.

Mr. Pike said it costs him about $75 to replace the fixtures, "but I'm not as bad off as those who can't do it for themselves and have to pay someone to do it."

Mr. Pike estimated it cost some homeowners about $300 to have the task done.

At the Ontario Provincial Police detachment on County Road 19, the well water has been abandoned in favor of a cistern, which has to be filled daily.

Clerk Lawrence St. Pierre of Maidstone Township said the first demand for a waterline came about 17 years ago but because of the cost there wasn't general acceptance.

Demand for a waterline was revived about three years ago. It gained momentum in 1972 when two-thirds of the residents along the proposed route in both municipalities petitioned to have the line installed.

Mr. St. Pierre said there was then a considerable delay in getting approval for the project from the provincial environment ministry.

Finally, after a delegation from the two municipalities demanded action, the ministry agreed to the project providing the municipalities enacted bylaws that would prohibit more development along the route.

Mr. St. Pierre said it appeared the ministry was concerned a waterline would encourage strip development along its length and aggravate an already critical pollution problem.

The two municipalities have agreed that development will be restricted.

Another delay occurred when the Town of Essex debated whether it would increase the size of the watermain that would eventually service the two townships. A larger main also will increase the town's water pressure.

Mr. St. Pierre said that it appears an inordinate amount of time has been required to complete plans for the waterline, it is no longer than the five years it took to have sewer projects completed in nearby municipalities.

Mr. St. Pierre said latest estimates indicate the cost of installing the larger water main in Essex will be about $100,000.

There are more than five miles of pipeline to be installed in the two townships and the total cost has been estimated at $365,000.

Essex would be responsible for $40,147 or 8.63 per cent of the total cost while Maidstone Township would be responsible for $175,037 or 41.18 per cent of the cost and Sandwich South would be required to pay $250,016 or 58.82 per cent of the cost.

There would be no provincial grants available for any portion of the work although the provincial environment ministry will arrange the financing as a local improvement project.

The question now for families like the McNeillys is whether the price of inconvenience is greater than that of a waterline.

'Cleo' Gets The Blame

By JOE MASKO

You can blame "Cleo" of television fame for all this.

That's what Dick Pike of Maidstone said as he checked over his 22 Basset Hounds before preparing their dinner.

Then he mixed up a conglomeration of meat and meal for his horde of hungry canines. It takes 18 pounds of meal and seven pounds of meat per day to keep them happy. And it adds up to about five tons of food per year.

The Basset Hounds, such as owned by Mr. Pike, have in recent years gained in popularity to where the breed now ranks about third in demand across the North American continent.

Much of this sudden rise in popularity it attributed to a Basset named Cleo which, with its mournful look and humorous antics, has caused laughter among millions of television viewers.

Mr. Pike, who breeds Bassets and is one of the foremost Basset showers in this district, says there are a few more reasons for the popularity of the breed.

"They're real performers," he said. "And they're a patient dog—the kind that makes an ideal house pet. They're alert and make good watchdogs. Bassets are also peaceful, not the kind that tears around and gets into all kinds of trouble."

This year, Mr. Pike expects his stock of Bassets will breed some 75 pups. Most of these will be sold and many will be entered in competitive dog shows.

Right now he has several on the road. All of them are winning their share of ribbons.

"These dogs also make good hunters," he said. "I've got one, Barlindall's Belle Patte, which I'm going to enter into the American Basset Hound Field Trial at Lebanon, Penna., on Oct. 18. She's got a great nose. If you get a Basset with a good nose, you can't beat it."

Mr. Pike's day at his kennel is one packed with action. There's never a dull moment. Cleaning the stalls and runs, preparing food and caring for pups, add up to a lot of work.

"But it's worth it. They're a quiet kind of dog that give you a lot of laughs. I really enjoy it."

Popularity of the breed is proven by the fact that just recently owners of this type of dog formed The Basset Club of Canada.

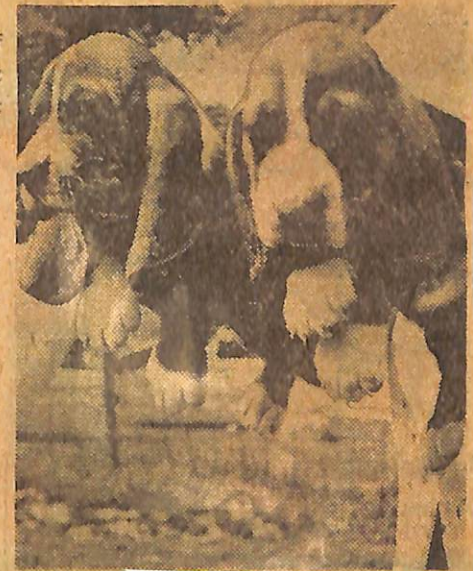

This association is made up of breeders, kennel operators and people who show Bassets from coast to coast. A number of U.S. residents also belong to the club.

"The association was formed to keep the breed at a good level. We watch for such things as poor breeding," Mr. Pike said. "After all, in 1928, there were only 68 known, full-blooded Bassets. Now there are several thousand. We want to protect the breed."

Officers of the new club are: Mike Knott of Woodslee, president; John L. Brown of Toronto, vice-president; Mrs. Knott, secretary; Mrs. John R. Orendorff, treasurer, and directors Richard Henderson of Peterborough, John R. Orendorff of London and Arthur G. Richard of Buffalo, N.Y.

It's dinner time at the kennels of Dick Pike of Maidstone. Mr. Pike, a Ford of Canada employee, raises Basset Hounds as a hobby. The Bassets are seen crowding their master as he feeds them. Eighteen pounds of meal and seven pounds of meat are required each day to keep the Bassets happy. Some of his dogs, top show champions, are currently on the road being shipped from dog show to dog show where they have been taking top honors in their class. Picture at left shows two young Basset pups. They are part of a litter of 11 pups and are almost perfect twins.

THE WINNERS—Simisco, a Junior Achievement mini-company that manufactures and markets table cigarette lighters from beer cans, and its president Mary Plamondon, took most of the trophies Wednesday at the group's annual banquet. Miss Plamondon, raised to the shoulders of counsellors Hank VanLith, left, and Philip Booker, right, both of Simpson-Sears Ltd., was named Achiever of the Year and president of the year. The Simisco company, whose members gathered around their silverware, was named company of the year.

Mary Plamondon is 'Achiever of the Year'

The Junior Achievement year wound up Wednesday evening with Mary Plamondon, 19, of Maidstone, being awarded Achiever of the Year honors at the 17th annual Future Unlimited banquet at Vanier Hall, University of Windsor.

Miss Plamondon, a first-year student at St. Clair College, also walked off with the award for company president of the year and her JA company, Simisco, was chosen company of the year.

The banquet and dance ended what JA executive director Paul Almond called "a highly successful year" for the organization, which brings together high school-age people to form mini-companies as a way of learning the intricacies of the free enterprise system with the help of counsellors from industry.

Mr. Almond said this year's program involved 325 young people and 18 companies.

Miss Plamondon has been a member of JA for three years. She was president of the Simisco Company, which manufactured and marketed table cigarette lighters from beer cans.

Simpson-Sears was the Windsor company which provided counselling for Simisco.

Mr. Almond said an experiment carried out in Windsor for the nationwide JA movement proved successful.

He said it involved increasing the number of hours spent on the program each week for achievers and counsellors while decreasing the length of the program year.

Mr. Almond said the experiment resulted in overall higher productivity and at the same time enabled the program to end a month earlier.

Trip to hairdresser saves mother, 3 children from fire

By Lorraine Gane
Star Staff Reporter

A trip to the hairdresser may have saved the lives of Sue Porter and three of her four children.

Mrs. Porter, who usually stays home Fridays with her three younger children, aged 11 months, 2½, and four years old, decided today to get her hair done.

FRIDAY, JULY 3, 1953.

Parr-Price Nuptials.

At a lovely double-ring ceremony in St. Stephen's Anglican Church, Oldcastle, Miss Doris Jean Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norton Price, of Oldcastle, was on Saturday, June 6th, united in marriage to George Findlay Parr, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Parr of Roseland. The Rev. G. C. Dickin officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of white organdie over taffeta, fashioned with a rounded neckline, cap sleeves and a full skirt which extended into a long train. She wore elbow-length tulle gloves which formed points over her hands. White lace daisies trimmed the bodice and skirt of her gown. Her fingertip two-tiered veil of illusion was held by a half-hat and she carried orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Mildred Curtis, the bride's cousin, as maid of honor, wore a ballerina-length gown of white organdie over yellow taffeta, featuring a two-tiered skirt and a fitted bodice styled similarly to the bride's, and a wide yellow taffeta sash. She wore a matching Dutch cap and carried a fan-shaped bouquet of red roses and yellow carnation petals.

Miss Gloria Price, the bride's sister, Miss Nora Parr, the bridegroom's sister, and Miss Roberta Tofflemire, as bridesmaids, wore gowns styled identically to that of the maid of honor, but carried fans of red roses backed with pastel shades of tulle.

Larry Burton was best man.

During the ceremony, Mrs. Harry Pettypiece sang "O Promise Me" and "The Lord's Prayer." Mrs. Clyde O'Neil was the organist.

Mrs. Price chose a mauve figured nylon dress for her daughter's wedding. She wore white accessories and a corsage of white carnations and stephanotis. Mrs. Parr, the bridegroom's mother, was lovely in a pale blue nylon dress with white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

A reception was held in St. Stephen's Parish Hall for 130 relatives and friends. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake embedded in tulle and surrounded by yellow flowers and white tapers.

Mr. and Mrs. Parr are residing in Oldcastle.

She left the house at 5335 Outer Blvd. at 8:30 a.m. with the children and took them to her babysitter in Windsor.

On her way to the hairdresser she stopped at a restaurant, where she learned her house was on fire.

Her husband Al, a Windsor police constable, was at work and their 14-year old son was in school.

Sandwich South firefighters, who received the call at 9 a.m., were still battling the blaze late this morning. Sandwich West fire department was also called in for assistance.

Most of the house's interior was damaged by the fire and firefighters had to drag out burnt furniture.

Sandwich South Fire Chief Frank Nostadt said cause of the fire is unknown. He said he could not give an estimate of the damage.

He said both fire departments had to bring in tankers of water because the watermains across the street from the house were frozen.

Porter, visibly shaken by the incident, said a call came in on his police radio and told him to go home because his house was on fire.

Porter, whose father was a fireman for 25 years, had bought a smoke detector but there was no one there to hear it. The house and its contents were insured.

The Porters had put their house up for sale and had received an offer, but the deal wasn't completed.

"I don't know what's going to happen now," said Mrs. Porter.

Porter said he and the family would stay at his mother's home until they find another place to live.

Norton Price Dies

One of Essex County's well known residents, Norton L. Price, died in his sleep on May 8th and was laid to rest on Monday in St. Stephen's cemetery, Sandwich South.

Norton was born in Tennessee on November 2nd, 1898. His childhood was spent in VanWert, Ohio, where the family moved in 1900. In 1913 his parents moved to Essex County where he has resided for the past 52 years.

He was particularly active in the cattle business and general farming. For years he was extremely proud of his purebred holsteins. He was also involved in the export of dairy cattle.

He is survived by his wife Rosie Curtis and six children, May (Mrs. Charles Wallich), of Pontiac; Douglas, of McGregor; Doris (Mrs. George Parr), of McGregor; McKinley, of Livonia; Gloria (Mrs. Herman Volz), of Detroit; Sharon, at home and 11 grandchildren. Sister Ruth (Mrs. Daniel Barry), of Windsor; brothers, John and Ray, of Windsor, and Roy, of Florida. His daughters-in-law, Mary Brannigan Price and Patricia Rotchell Price and sons-in-law Herman Volz, George Parr and Charles Wallich were as dearly loved and considered as much a part of his family as his own children.

PRICE

This area lost another of its most well-liked and respected citizens this week, in the death of Norton Price of Essex town-line near Paquette.

Mr. Price passed away over the weekend at the age of 66 following declining health in the past two years.

Farmer and cattle buyer, Norton was well-known throughout the county and who can forget the jokes, the laughter and good times when the late Norton was in the midst of people.

Around the Oldcastle Co-Op a number of the local gents each winter came almost everyday to play their favorite game of euchre in the local warehouse. Norton will be missed by his card playing buddies at the table, come the next winter or rainy day.

From here we extend the sympathy of your Highlighter to the Price family who have lost a husband, a father and a friend to those about him.

An Evolving Career Teacher of the Year

On her way to greater career achievement Maxine Scragg has been named teacher of the year for Essex and Kent counties (Zone 1).

In this first year the Ontario Provincial Federation has presented the award, the former Maxine Price of Essex was nominated by her peers in Chapter 125 Windsor/Essex, of the Council for Exceptional Children (CEC).

Not a surprising achievement for this woman who has been answering opportunity's knock since university days.

Before she graduated she had married and started her family. To continue meant hard work and long hours of it. Attendance at teachers' college came later. Now as a grandmother of four she is finishing her dissertation that will make her Dr. Maxine Scragg in Communications Sciences and Disorders.

She is speech and language teacher for the Essex County Board in its special education program. That brings her full circle from being a graduate of Essex primary and secondary school to teaching in the Maplewood system, Sunparlor and the Essex High School.

Along the way she was a speech teacher in London and Hamilton, is the author of "Guidelines for Language Assessment" and co-author of "Auditory Training" and "Listen and Speak", for use in schools.

She is in demand as a speaker at CEC conferences and made a presentation to a Huston, Texas speech conference. Awards aren't new to her either; she received the May Court bursary for advanced studies in London and the Federation of Women Teachers Association of Ontario Fellowship for Advanced Studies.

Were these achievements her goals in high school? No. But her desire to excel revealed or presented new opportunities, as the case may be. And Maxine responded.

She has been a member of the CEC since 1960 and is a member of the Delta Kappa Gamma Society and the Windsor Essex Speech and Language Pathologists.

The citation when she was proclaimed teacher of the year stated Maxine has been responsible for furthering the education of the exceptional child most of her teaching career. "Her competence and commitment to exceptional children is evident in the ways she shares her expertise and relates to pupils, parents and teachers."

Maxine started her upward trek of hard work, determination and dedication as a talented musician when she taught piano while attending high school and university. It intensified after one year in university when she married, with the determination she would graduate. The goal never dimmed, even after her daughter was born. With her degree and a family of two she set career aside for two years to be a homemaker.

Then following her mother's footsteps (Lauretta Price) she enrolled in teachers' college. The challenge there was not just because she had a home and family to care for; the London school board where she lived, didn't hire married women. She broke the barrier to become the first one on staff.

"I made sure my marks were good enough they would have to notice me," she laughs now.

As new teachers do, she got the more difficult cases in her class to provide experience. And they began to read. So the board noticed her again after three years as regular teacher, and asked her if she were interested in special education.

She grabbed that door to opportunity and swung it wide. The way ahead took five summers of study at Wayne State University to earn her master's degree in speech pathology.

The convenience of being able to stay with her mother in Essex and leave the children with her, made Wayne State a logical choice.

Later the ministry of education hired Maxine to conduct summer classes in special education for other teachers.

Ten years ago she started taking courses that have led to a pinnacle; the doctorate she will receive in the new year. Work on the required dissertation began in August of this year. Result of the "horrendous" task is an inch-thick typed volume which Maxine guards as if it were the crown jewels. Which it is in a way. The crown of her efforts.

But it's not the end. "I plan to do research after this, but there won't be so much pressure on me," says this veteran pressure-worker.

Children in the middle grades who have undetected language problems, will be her research target.

"I will research the more subtle problems that hinder their ability to do literature and the more difficult problems in math because they don't understand the principles involved."

All this studying has been secondary to her teaching duties. As well she has been instrumental in developing effective professional resource material for teachers.

"There is nothing available," she says of the possibility of purchasing illustrated material to relate to the lesson being taught. The board's filing cabinets overflow with Maxine's creations.

Her musical talent comes into use as well.

"I use music with little children, and, my goodness, does it ever work."

At Sunparlor as they go down the hall she leads them in singing, one - two - three - up to ten, ad-libbing a rhyming ditty.

"I find children who can't speak sentences can sing them," she explains.

In case you think Maxine's life is one of work and study, in that order, she does take vacations.

"There's the month of August," she says in all seriousness.

Work may stop but the learning process continues for this acquisitive career woman.

"Travel gives us a better perspective of what we have here when we see the world," she maintains.

Her travel has taken her to Greece, North Africa, Spain, Hawaii, to name a few places. Next is Mexico.

Her daughter is a third generation teacher in London and her son is working on his doctorate in Toronto University.

As the federation representative said when making the award, "If teaching is an art, complete with scope for creative uniqueness, then Maxine is a true artist."

Speech pathologist Maxine Price Scragg works with a student, Dennis Lewitt, in special education for the Essex County Board. She was recently nominated Zone 1 Teacher of the Year by the Council for Exceptional Children, Ontario Provincial Federation.

MAY 7, 1982 - E.F.P.

The alert tilt to a bird's eye as it perches on the edge of its nest brings the painting of Oldcastle artist, Terry Priddle, to life.

He began painting 20 years ago and took formal training in England. Wildlife — the subjects of nature, are his models and he observes them closely to make a clear memory picture.

To draw a bird like the one in his picture above, he sketches half a dozen poses and chooses one.

Birds are his specialty but he raises animals and sketches them.

Mr. Priddle teaches adult education classes at St. Clair College.

Among his 9 paintings at Essex Library for May, is the bigger-than-life head of an owl staring down from the top shelf in lively intensity.

Prince family lives in fear of house guests on wheels

By ROB VAN NIE

For the past two years, errant drivers have been beating a path to Maxie and Joan Prince's door.

The last driver was so successful, Mr. Prince fears the next car may end up in the kitchen of his rented home near Oldcastle.

"The old house is going to take a beating," he said in a recent interview while surveying a row of battered trees and shrubs which up until now have guarded his home from a continuous onslaught of speeding cars.

Although they have lived in the same two-storey, frame home for the past ten years, the Prince's problems began about two years ago when the first of at least 12 cars going north on Oldcastle Road careened past a stop sign and the checkerboard sign marking the dead end in front of their home.

Oldcastle Road stops at North Talbot Road, directly across from the Prince home. The road continues on its way north just past the house, after a slight jog down North Talbot.

The drivers of cars that end up in the Prince's yard complain that they didn't know there was a stop coming up, or they thought the road continued in a straight line.

Mrs. Prince has told Sandwich South Township council of her plight, and council is considering placing a "stop ahead" sign on Oldcastle Road, and perhaps installing a guard rail in front of the Prince home.

In the meantime, the Princes are afraid to park their truck near the house and fear that children playing in their yard may be hit one of these days.

But Mrs. Prince recalls some of the incidents with humor.

There was the time her son told her there was a car in the wheat field behind their home. He was telling the truth; the car had driven through the yard beside their home and ploughed into the field.

Another time an OPP officer asked a driver who had become bogged down in the shoulder of the road if he needed help, not seeing that the man had broken the hydro pole in front of the Prince home.

The man politely refused, got his car on the road and drove off, leaving the pole dangling in the wind.

But some of the incidents have been downright frightening.

Last winter a teenager ran into a pear tree in the yard, knocking down hydro wires and throwing the house into darkness.

The teen, who required about 60 stitches to close wounds on his face, has been the only serious injury so far, said Mrs. Prince.

However, a few weeks ago a car struck a dead-end checkerboard sign at the end of the road, hit several trees and mowed into a row of shrubs in front of the Prince's kitchen.

"Now they've got a path through, they're going to come right into the kitchen," said Mr. Prince.

Mrs. Prince says it's impossible to estimate how many cars have run into the yard, because many drivers simply get back on the road and leave.

She doesn't know why the accidents began happening two years ago, although it may be because of an increase in the number of drivers using Oldcastle Road as a back way into Windsor.

She said she hopes action is taken soon before two cars collide at the intersection.

"You can replace property but you can't replace a life," she said.

It still remains to be seen whether more signs will prevent drivers from running the stop sign.

But one policeman didn't hold out much hope. He told Mrs. Prince the only way to prevent the accidents is to take all the cars off the road, she said.

Pulleyblank-Griesinger Wedding

At an impressive candlelight ceremony Friday evening at 7 o'clock in All Saints' Church, Rosemary Griesinger was united in marriage to William Louis Pulleyblank. The bride is the daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel and Mrs. William Griesinger, of Howard Ave., Roseland, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Earl Pulleyblank, of Ridgetown, formerly of Essex.

Very Rev. R. Charles Brown of London, assisted by Rev. William K. Morrison of St. James' Church, Roseland, officiated at the service in a setting of calla lilies and white snapdragons, the guest pews being marked by nosegays of white flowers.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, the bride was lovely in a gown of white French silk peau de soie with shadow applique forming a scalloped neckline and trimming the very full skirt. A jewelled band held her fingertip-length veil of French illusion, and she carried a white Bible topped with a white orchid.

Mrs. William Griesinger, Jr., who was her matron of honour, was in powder blue silk embroidered organza over taffeta, fashioned with a scoop neckline and cap sleeves. She wore a tiny face veil held to her head with bows of matching taffeta, and carried a nosegay of pastel flowers. Mary McGavin, as bridesmaid, wore an identically styled costume of shell pink, and carried a similar bouquet.

Robert Pulleyblank assisted his brother as best man, and William Griesinger, Jr., was the usher.

A small reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, where further arrangements of white flowers formed a background for the receiving line. The wedding cake was arranged in a bed of tulle on a table backed by calla lilies. It was flanked by burning white tapers.

Mrs. Griesinger wore for her daughter's wedding a sheath of dusty pink Chantilly lace featuring a scooped neckline and cap sleeves, and loose back panels on the skirt. Her hat was a flimsy with a flat bow of matching satin, and her corsage was a purple orchid.

Mrs. Pulleyblank chose a sheath lace dress, featuring side panel detail and wore a mink stole. Her accessories were beige.

Mr. and Mrs. Pulleyblank left later for a short motor trip, the bride donning for travel a suit of purple basket weave, the box jacket lined in pale orchid to match the blouse. Her half-hat was in matching purple and she wore a purple orchid. Mr. and Mrs. Pulleyblank will live in the Sheila Apartments, in Riverside.

Out-of-town guests were present from Cleveland, Detroit, Grosse Pointe, Essex and Ridgetown.

Earl Pulleyblank advised council he could get 3000 seedlings from the government free of charge, the only cost being the express. He thought it would be a good idea to get them and plant them on the fairgrounds and in five years time they would be fair-sized and the town could sell most of them and thin them out. Some members thought it would be foolish to plant them there as they wouldn't be cared for and likely destroyed. It was decided to plant them on a vacant lot between the pond and the rear of Chief Harrison's property, owned and offered by Mr. Hutchinson.

A beautiful spring day set the wedding for Kathy Pulleyblank, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pulleyblank, of Oldcastle and Chris McCarthy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett McCarthy, of Maidstone.

Kathy was escorted up the aisle by her father, in an old fashioned gown of miramist. Featuring a high neckline, long full sleeves and a A-line skirt with a full sewn in train. French lace trimmed the neckline, sleeves, bodice and hemline. Matching lace trimmed her fingertip mantilla veil.

The bride carried a dainty bouquet of baby's breath, stephandtis with roses, ivy, and yellow silk flowers.

Chris at Kathy's side looked handsome in his deep green tuxedo, with a white rose boutonniere.

Mother of the bride looked lovely in a becoming yellow and green floral patterned gown of chiffon over taffeta. Kathy's father chose a chocolate brown tuxedo.

The groom's mother was charming in a beautiful solid rose gown of crepe-knit and his father also wore a chocolate brown tuxedo.

Laurie Esping was maid of honour and Trisha as flower girl wore green old-fashioned yolked dresses. Wendy Patricia and Kerry the bridesmaids had identical dresses in yellow. All wore straw hats and carried wicker baskets of white daisies and baby's breath.

Pat Hayes stood as best man and Ed, Earl, and Andy were groomsmen, also in deep green tuxedos with yellow rose boutonniere.

Attending Chris and Kathy's wedding were Kathy's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Markert, of Woodslee and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Pulleyblank of Leamington. Chris' grandmother, Mrs. Grace McCarthy, of Maidstone, also witnessed the exchange of their vows in St. Mary's Church, Maidstone.

The happy couple are now living in Maidstone.

. . . the next time you watch the Maidstone ball team in action on their home diamond—look upon these young men not only as ballplayers but as "ballplaying landscapers."

Through their untiring efforts and many hours of hard work, they completely landscaped the grounds into one of Essex County's most beautiful ball parks.

Every member of the club is proud to have played a part in this big project, and we as Suburban Landscape Service are pleased to have worked along with them. Our congratulations for their enthusiastic efforts.

Man, 19, in critical condition after two-car head-on crash

A Walker Road man is in critical condition in hospital today following a two-car, head-on collision Thursday afternoon in Sandwich South Township.

Mark Putman, 19, was admitted to the intensive care unit of Metropolitan Hospital with chest and abdominal injuries, nursing official said.

Essex OPP said the accident occurred about 3:25 p.m. when another car, driven by Nancy Snow, 33, of 5251 Grand Blvd., collided with Putman's auto.

Miss Snow and a passenger in her car, Patricia Ann Shaw, 16, also of 5251 Grand Blvd., were both treated and released at hospital.

Police said the accident occurred on Walker Road just north of Highway 3 when the accident occurred.

Miss Snow has been charged with careless driving.

Mrs. Don Belleperche, (Beulah Quick) aged 56 years passed away at IODE Hospital on Dec. 23, 1977. Beloved wife of Donald, of the Collins subdivision Hwy. 3, dear mother of Wayne Quick, Betty Anne, Mrs. Robert Howard, and Joyce, Mrs. Don Bolsmler, all of Windsor. Stepmother of David Belleperche also of Windsor. Funeral from Anderson Funeral Home on Tuesday to Holy Rosary Church. Private burial service at Heavenly Rest Cemetery.

David Quick a student from Western Secondary School and also a member of the Cadets from the same school enjoyed a very cool weekend along with other Cadets camping, out at the Little Raccoon Campsite at Point Pelee. The two teachers, Mr. Valley and Mr. Wilkey, who supervised the group should be commended for their pluck. The weekend camp resulted in the discovery of a new "hot chocolate" which the boys named "Dr. Wilkeys Witches Brew" after the founder. Reports are that they had a very good time.

QUICK--Russell E.: In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, who passed away one year ago December 20, 1985.

We watched you suffer,
We watched you die,
But all we could do,
Was just stand by,
But God saw you getting tired,
When a cure was not to be,
So he closed his arms around you,
And whispered, Come to me.
You didn't deserve what you went through,
So he gave you rest,
It broke our hearts, to lose you,
Dad.
But you did not go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day God called you home.
--Loved and sadly missed by Charlotte, Doug and granddaughters.

Anyone for a whopper? Come and get it

It would take two men to hold this one. Maybe it's a papaburger, or even a mama burger, but it's sure not a baby burger!

To the Russell Quick family it is just a nuisance. And nobody wants this 5 foot replica of a hamburger complete with ketchup and onions.

It fell off something, one night last week just after 1 a.m. and landed in the centre of highway #98, or county road 46, if you prefer. The Quick family heard the commotion and investigated. Before they had a chance to warn motorists or call the police, a car crashed into it and pushed it along the highway. Yes the car has some slight damage. How's that for an alibi? "I collided with a hamburger!"

Police theorize that it may have fallen off a truck or a float. Naturally the Quicks helped take it off the road and onto their front lawn to avoid a n accident. But there it sits, attracting people who stop and take a picture. Meanwhile Mrs. Quick keeps trying to persuade someone to take it away, like the police, or the Department of Transportation and Communication. But nobody wants a styrofoam whopper.

JULY 13, 1972, ESSEX TIMES

WHAT HAMBURGLAR DROPPED THIS? The much touted whopper that takes two hands to hold has nothing on this one that would take two men to hold. If fell off some type of vehicle onto #98 highway and had to be moved onto the Quicks front lawn. But who's responsible for taking it away? Mrs. Quick was having trouble finding that answer.

PUPPY LOVE — Irene Quick, a worker at the Essex County Humane Society on Provincial Road, is getting a lot of attention from a homeless spaniel pup "boarding" with the society. Irene is shown engraving a telephone number on the back of a dog tag as part of the society's new program to help locate owners of lost dogs faster. Anyone who buys a dog from the society or wants to bring in their dog's tag can have their telephone number engraved on the tag. If you find a lost pup from now on check the tag, maybe you can give the owner a call.

John Robert Quilliam, age 70 years, of Hwy. 114, passed away on January 3rd, at Hotel Dieu. Deceased was highly respected and well known when he was a valued employee of R. C. Flood & Sons, until he was cruelly beaten and robbed a few years ago, on returning to his home after his day's work. John put up a brave fight but was unable to ever work again. Surviving is his beloved sister, Mrs. Violet McLeod, of Windsor; dear uncle of Jean, Mrs. Gordon Tratt; James McLeod; Margie, Mrs. Donald Browell, all of Windsor, and William McLeod, of Detroit. Funeral was held on Wednesday at 11 a.m. with Rev. John D. M. Wood officiating. Interment was in Victoria Memorial Cemetery.

The late John Quilliam, an avid Welshman, will be remembered by his friends and neighbours as a quiet living good citizen, as was his late father, a faithful reader of the Bible. His many acts of charity that he was always the anonymous giver and his interests in astrology and his many pleasures in the sport of horse racing, that made his life enjoyable, to his peaceful living. His familiar figure will be missed in the Village.

We are pleased to report that Stanley Sextos is showing improvement after his set-back.

JAN. 7. 1972

The many friends of John Quilliam, age 60 years, of Highway 114, are hoping for a speedy recovery in Metropolitan Hospital, from his many injuries received on Friday evening, shortly after six o'clock, when he returned home from work from R. C. Flood Grain Co. John answered a knock on the door and a man said "This is a hold-up". John put up a tremendous fight with his two assailants, who left without getting anything.

IN MEMORIAM

QUINLAN - In loving memory of a dear son, Doug, who passed away October 19th, 1979.

Memories are treasures
No one can steal
We heard him laugh
And speak to us
We saw him climb the stairs

And in our fondest memories

We found him everywhere
We called to him
He called to us

And we were not alone.
God knows how much we miss him

He counts the tears we shed

And whispers hush he only sleeps

Your loved one is not dead
Someday sometime our eyes shall see

The face we loved so well.
-Sadly missed by Mom & Dad.

Sabutsch-Ramsay Wedding At St. Andrew's

At an impressive ceremony at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, the Rev. William Lawson united in marriage Miss Dolores Mary Jane Ramsay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Ramsay of Oldcastle, and Mr. Cyril John Sabutsch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Sabutsch of Chandler Rd. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of Chantilly lace styled with a portrait neckline outlined with iridescent sequins. The long sleeves formed points over her hands. The skirt of nylon tulle was scattered with lace appliques, and she carried yellow roses.

Mrs. Ted Emmerson, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, wore a floor-length gown of shrimp Chantilly lace, styled with a V neckline and a full skirt of crystalette. She wore a matching hat of lace and crystalette and carried white carnations scattered with lace leaves to match the bodice of the dress.

Miss Carole Sabutsch, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Joan Howe and Mrs. Al Desjardins, as bridesmaids, wore gowns of sea foam green styled like that of the matron of honor. Their bouquets were of white carnations with lace leaves to match their dresses.

Mr. Darwyn Kernahan was best man and the ushers were Mr. Emmerson, Mr. Desjardins and Mr. Elwood Dunk, uncle of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Ramsay wore a dress of ice blue lace, featuring a V neckline. Her picture hat was of navy velvet and her accessories were of navy. She wore a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Sabutsch wore rose taffeta with a matthing hat, navy accessories and pink roses.

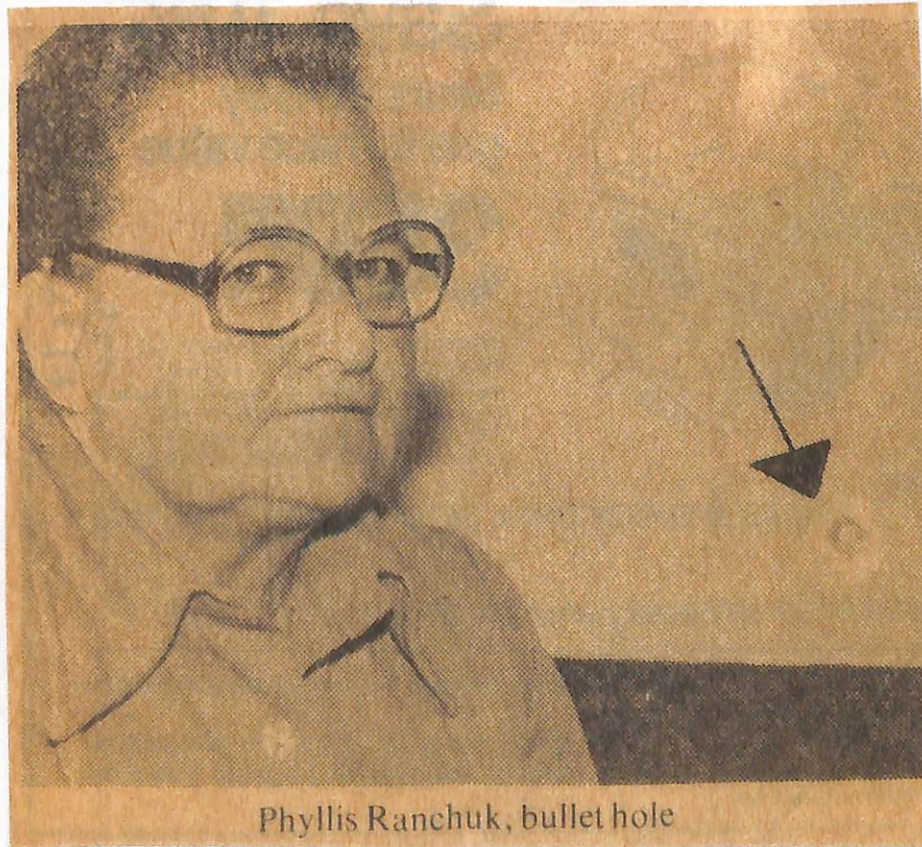

For a wedding trip to Miami,

OCT. 4. 1955

Florida, the bride wore a suit of ice-blue cashmere, a flamingo hat and black accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Sabutsch will reside in the Cairngorm Apartments.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. William A. Stewart of Grimsby, Mr. and Mrs.

Robert Baker and Mary Jane, of Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. Jessie Dunk, grandmother of the bride, Mr. Arthur Dunk and Mrs. Jean Avey of Brighton, Mr. Irwin Tucker of Cobourg, Mrs. Marion Broad of Tillsonburg, Mrs. Gold and Mr. Marvin Gold of Toronto and Mr. and Mrs. John Hagman, Jr., of Detroit.

Phyllis Ranchuk, bullet hole

By Rob Van Nie

Star staff reporter

Steve and Phyllis Ranchuk went to a funeral March 21.

If they had been home, the next funeral could have been their own.

While they were out, a bullet smashed through their bedroom window and tore into the opposite wall, just above the bed.

The bullet remains embedded in the wall, but its impact knocked a piece of plaster the size of a silver dollar out of the living room wall just above a couch.

The Ranchuks live in Sandwich South Township near Windsor Airport, a rifle blast away from the city boundary.

Const. William Freeman, the investigating Ontario Provincial Policeman, speculates the bullet was fired from a nearby railway track which forms the boundary between Windsor and Sandwich South.

He says the bullet, probably from a .22 calibre rifle, was likely fired at the house accidentally by nearby hunters.

Const. Freeman said neighbors say they frequently see young teen-agers from Windsor hunting in the area.

There are no suspects. Const. Freeman agreed it would be virtually impossible to find out who fired the bullet, which is still inside the wall.

"It's no use tearing up a guy's wall for a bullet which you'll probably never match with a gun," he said.

Although Const. Freeman said the OPP rarely gets complaints about serious shooting incidents of this nature, the problems of hunting in mostly-rural Sandwich South Township on the outskirts of Windsor are a thorn in the side of township councillors.

Coun. Terry Priddle, who has had his own problems with hunters, wants the township to pass a bylaw to control the discharge of firearms.

He proposed a bylaw to council last year, before he was elected, that would only allow property owners and tenants, or persons with the written authorization of an owner or tenant, to discharge guns in the township.

Priddle fears a bylaw won't be passed until someone is seriously injured or killed.

The councillor says whole "convoys" and "battalions" of hunters from Windsor come to the township to shoot.

Priddle, a planning consultant who raises wild turkeys, ornamental pheasants and other birds as a hobby, says at times hunters line up in a row and "very methodically walk through a field and anything that comes up they shoot at."

He says the hunting practis-es are worst during winter when there is snow on the ground and wildlife is easier to track.

Both Mrs. Ranchuk, and Priddle, who lives in a rural area near Oldcastle, say people hunt near their homes year round.

"You can't seem to control these people with guns," said Mrs. Ranchuk.

A grandmother who doesn't want to reveal her age, Mrs. Ranchuk had to visit her doctor after the shooting incident because her face broke out in blotches due to high blood pressure.

"My face was so blotchy the doctor thought some-one beat me up," said Mrs. Ranchuk.

She has asked council if it can do something about the vacant property across from her house which many hunters use.

The property is owned by a Hamilton warehousing company, and the township doesn't have the authority to post no-trespassing signs or enforce them.

"If you tell them (hunters) to leave, they as much as tell you to go" said Mrs. Ranchuk.

She said she has seen hunters shoot pigeons belonging to neighborhood children.

Ironically, a gun rack with two rifles hangs on the bedroom wall of her home a few feet from where the bullet entered the window.

Mrs. Ranchuk said her husband used to hunt, but hasn't in many years.

Although she said "I'm afraid to death of guns," she doesn't want to ban all hunting in the township.

"It's a sport for some people."

Priddle thinks he has found a compromise which would only allow those with property or permission to hunt.

A hunter from outside the municipality would need the written permission of a property owner or tenant to discharge a firearm in the township, according to the bylaw, patterned after one in effect in a township near Toronto.

Current hunting and trespass laws put the onus on a landowner to tell hunters to get off his property.

The warning could be verbal or written, such as on no hunting signs, according to a Ministry of Natural Resources official.

Signs, however, are often shot down or the hunters say they don't see them.

Priddle says township residents can't stand in their fields all day watching for hunters.

He has about 50 birds of various species and says he's had so many problems with hunters he's considering moving to a more urban area.

Although Priddle has proposed a compromise solution, after hearing about the Ranchuk incident he made a motion at township council to ban the discharge of firearms in the municipality altogether.

A similar prohibition is in effect in many urban municipalities such as Windsor and Sandwich West Township has also passed one.

But in Sandwich West, which has many residential roads scattered throughout its rural areas, farmers have complained that a ban on hunting has increased crop-devouring wildlife.

Priddle's motion to prohibit the discharge of firearms in Sandwich South failed to win any support.

According to Reeve Ray Robinet, council felt that was too drastic a move at this time.

And Dave Hobbs, the township's building inspector and bylaw enforcement officer said he'd be the first one to break the ban.

"Go ahead and pass the bylaw and come over and watch me," he said.

"The first skunk that comes on my property and I'll nail it."

"I agree with what you say (about poor hunting practices), but why nail everybody?" asked Hobbs.

Among the complaints Priddle has about hunters are:

— They have killed many of his birds and he no longer can breed racing pigeons because they were decimated — People have shot his birds from the road, run onto his property to pick them up, then raced back to their cars and driven away;

— He must now keep his tame birds penned in back of the barn because they are shot if they wander about the yard;

— there are scars made by shotgun pellets on his siding;

— From a window in his home, he has counted as many as 21 hunters at the same time in a field he owns;

— His no hunting signs, as well as many signs in the neighborhood have been riddled with pellets and destroyed;

— More pheasants are shot illegally in the winter months when there is snow on the ground than during the fall pheasant season.

Priddle says its ironic that in order to raise migratory birds such as Canada Geese, he must get a federal government permit and meet stringent regulations, including a visit by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police every other year to inspect the premises.

Meanwhile, hunters enter his property to shoot the same birds and get away with it.

Robinet said council will take a good look at Priddle's proposed bylaw if he presents it again.

Reeb-Stratford Vows Spoken

In an impressive setting of white gladioli and yellow mums in the Essex United Church on Saturday, September 25th, Rev. Gordon Geiger officiated at a double ring ceremony uniting in marriage Donna Louisa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stratford and James Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Reeb, of Maidstone.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked stunning in her floor-length wedding gown of white organza. The bodice was highlighted by a shallow scooped neckline and elbow-length sleeves. Elegance was portrayed in the gently controlled semi-sheath skirt falling from an empire waist. An extra fullness at the back cascaded to a romantic chapel train. The empire waist, bodice, and shirt were strewn with appliques of delicate French chantilly lace. A single rose held in place a three-tiered finger-tip veil. The bridal bouquet of stephanotis and trailing ivy, centred with a pink orchid was carried on a white Bible. The bride wore a string of pearls, a gift of the groom.

Mrs. Shona Jones, of Windsor, as matron of honour, Georgina Smith, of Windsor, Lois Reid and Reva Reid, cousins of the bride, as bridesmaids, were gowned alike in floor-length dresses of kelly green peau de soie. The girls wore matching headdresses of net and peau de soie leaves and carried heart-shaped nose gays of shasta daisies.

The groom was assisted by his brother Bob as best man and by Jim Wilson, Nelson Jenking and Bill Stratford, brother of the bride, as ushers.

Before the ceremony and during the signing of the register, John Tully sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "The Lord's Prayer." Marjorie Allen assisted at the organ.

A dinner was held for 150 guests in the I.O.O.F. Hall followed by an open reception at which Barry Chamberlain's Orchestra provided music for dancing.

Mrs. Stratford, mother of the bride, chose a turquoise brocaded sheath with matching jacket, black patent accessories and a corsage of pink mums, while Mrs. Reeb wore a champaign beige dress, brown accessories and a corsage of aqua carnations.

For travelling the bride donned a two-piece wool suit of cranberry red with black accessories and black picture hat. The couple honeymooned in Northern Ontario after which they took up residence at Marlin Centre, R. R. 2, Oldcastle.

The engagement of Shirley Hill and Douglas Reeb, was announced by her parents.

Congratulations to Sister Catherine Renaud, of the Order of Religious Hospitaliers of St. Joseph of Hotel Dieu, who through many years of faithful service from 1944 to 1956 at the Home of St. John the Evangelist, saw the urgent need for bigger accommodations for a Home for the Aged. Sister Renaud was born on the 7th Concession of Maidstone Township the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex Renaud, and received her early education at Sacred Heart (No. 2) School. On Sunday the beautiful, modern, million dollar Villa Maria was opened to the public at the dedication services by Most Reverend John C. Cody, D.D. L.L.D., Bishop of London. A reception followed the program. Villa Maria has a capacity of 131 beds with a waiting list of 115. The first home for elderly people in 1944 had only 14 beds which grew with the purchase of two additional homes to 56. These facilities are operated on a non-denomination basis. Villa Maria is located at 2856 Riverside Drive, west, at the Ambassador Bridge, and is truly a beautiful modern home for the Aged of Essex County to live in, overlooking the Detroit River. The Sisters of Hotel Dieu are to be commended for this tremendous undertaking.

Celebrity Concoctions

GUS REVENBERG

He might be famous for his aggressive play on the field, but friends claim Gus 'Augie' Revenberg is a leather marshmallow (y'know, tough outside, soft inside). Gus played defensive tackle for the Ottawa Rough Riders from '70-'72, winning awards for 'spirit and determination' before joining the B.C. Lions ('73-'74). A knee injury ended his football career, however, and Gus returned to his home town (he's an Assumption graduate) last year as owner of a Pontiac-Buick/GMC dealership.

Despite his involvement with the CFL, Gus firmly believes that Canada needs the NFL along with more emphasis on college ball.

The soft-spoken Gus, known by sportswriters as the 'sack of cement from Windsor' comes from a family of 13, which may or may not explain his style of play. But one thing's for sure. This vegetable dish is his favorite family recipe, one that Gus likes to 'tackle' when he gets into the kitchen.

Wortel Stampote
(Carrot or Vegetable Melange)

1 large bag of carrots, thinly sliced
8 potatoes, halved
1 clove garlic, minced
3 bay leaves
2 onions chopped
4 Schneider's Dutch sausage
1/4 cup butter
1/3 cup milk

Put first five ingredients into large Dutch oven and cover with water. Add sausage. Boil 35 minutes until potatoes and carrots are fork tender. Remove sausage and bay leaves. Drain. Add butter and milk and mash until it has a chunky consistency. Serve on large platter with sausage. Garnish with parsley. Serve with horse radish for sausage and Maggi for potatoes.

OUR READERS SAY...

Testimony to a miracle of healing

Dear friends and neighbours:

Next spring it will have been twenty-one years since we, my wife, eight children, my father and myself immigrated from Holland to Canada. We lived around Stratford for three years and then moved to Oldcastle where we built up a dairy farm. It was not always easy but those times made you realize who you could count on--God. My family continued to grow -- we now have thirteen children and nineteen grandchildren. After the first ten years my father passed away. We know that he is up in heaven praying for every one of us.

Shortly after that I was stricken with Multiple Sclerosis. It was not a bad case the first eight years. I continued to work not knowing what was wrong with me. Eventually my wife had to take over all the heavy work

For those who don't know anything about Multiple Sclerosis it is a disease in the central nervous system which can eventually cripple you. I was not crippled but close to it. I was uncoordinated, had a lack of balance, some vertabrates had deteriorated on the one side of my back and worst of all I had a bad bladder for which I had been operated on twice in Victoria Hospital. I was taking eight pills a day for my bladder alone and they didn't seem to be helping much.

At the end of September my wife and I returned to Victoria Hospital for my check-up. We asked the neurologist if there were any special exercises I could do to help myself but he replied: "There is no cure for this disease." This helped only to make me feel more depressed.

Right about then my wife and a neighbour started attending prayer meetings at Holy Rosary Church in Windsor. I didn't particularly want to go but by October my wife had me convinced and I went. I came home thinking it was really wierd but the second time I became interested. That same week we heard that a chartered bus was leaving Windsor for Pittsburgh for a prayer service of Miss Kathryn Kuhlman, where many people are cured physically and spiritually by God through her. I met a few people that had been to one of her services and they seemed so happy and peaceful that I decided to go just to get the same feeling. When we got there, we noticed all the people that were worse off then I was so I asked the Lord: "God don't worry about healing me, I'll be happy if you just give me that special feeling and keep my family together, now and in heaven." But the Lord seemed to have other plans.

one of Miss Kuhlman's helpers came up to me and said, "Come on. Get up and try to walk." I looked at her somewhat angrily and answered, "I can't get up. I can't walk, I'm not cured," she told me, "You're touched through the Lord today, don't let the evil spirit tell you that you can't." And I could do it. In front of over three thousand people I got up and without a cane I walked.

When I got back to my seat the first thing my wife noticed was how warm my right hand was which had been cold for so long. After the service, as someone had predicted, I had a violent reaction. It seemed as though someone was telling me that I couldn't walk-I wasn't healed. But my wife encouraged me and when the devil started to bother me we would say a prayer. The next day back at home, we discovered that my whole body had changed. Everything that was bothering me had disappeared. I have to learn to walk all over again because my muscles don't seem to want to get right back my walking is still a little stiff but is getting better every day. Even if I stay this way I'll be very very happy. I no longer stand crooked and I don't use a cane but the nicest part of it is this; it is eight weeks since I have used my bladder pills and contrary to what many people believed, I'm still not in the hospital. Before I couldn't go one day without them but I'm feeling just fine now, no drugs necessary. There is one thing I have not yet mentioned and it is more important then all the rest. I have received the greatest gift from the Holy-Spirit, the inner peace, joy and happiness, and my love for my fellow man. This is something that nothing in the world could give me. This and fact that though no one on earth could cure my disease, God could in one minute.

That Sunday I guess I really realized it though. I went to mass in our parish church and could stand and kneel, something I hadn't done for a few years. When Communion time came, I walked up without a cane, received Communion. When I got back to my seat I knelt down and cried and thanked God for this great miracle.

Since then I have been baptized in the Holy-Spirit at our prayer group in Windsor and have received even more happiness, which comes over me many times during Mass, or when I read the bible, or am praying. I can't describe how meaningful Mass and Communion are to me now. All I can do is give thanks and praise the Lord.

To the altar ... with no need to rehearse

A beaming father and his bevy of beauties

Many a bride has trouble choosing her wedding party.

But for Therese Stiers (nee Revenberg), it was easy.

When she walked down the aisle of St. Rose of Lima Catholic Church Saturday afternoon to marry Larry Stiers, she was accompanied by her eight sisters.

Mariette Jacinta, 29, was maid of honor. She was preceded by: Marie Vandenberg-Reid, 37; Lidwena Vucic, 35; Gemma Vandenberg, 33; Agnes Zivanov, 31; Mariotte Russell, 30; Jacinta Collins, 28; Lucy Brown, 25; and Bernadette Market, 22.

This was their last chance. At 20, Therese is the youngest and the last of 13 children to get married. In addition to the nine sisters there are four Revenberg brothers — Theo, 38; Tony, 36; Gus, 32; and Gerry, 21.

How did the parents of the bride feel?

"Well, we're happy for the children and we're happy to be alone again," said Gerry Revenberg.

"I like it, but in another way, I feel a little bit sorry. She's my last one," he said.

But Mrs. Revenberg said that, with 34 grandchildren, there's always a house full of people.

"I like grandchildren because they come and don't stay. You can spoil them and send them home."

Congratulations to Anthony and Jeanne Revenberg on the safe arrival of a 9 lb. 10 oz. baby daughter, Nicole May Marie, on Halowe'en at Metropolitan Hospital. Sister for Tony Jr. and Chris. Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Revenberg of Oldcastle, their 22nd grandchild.

Perfect Gift For Stingray Winners

Small cars may be the trend but a Stingray Corvette is hardly the answer for the transportation needs of Ted Revenberg's family of six. Especially not the pint size one he won in the Kennedy Furniture draw at Christmas time. It surely will be the provider for a lot of fun and John (at the wheel) made first claim to it as Ruth and Erin wait their turn to try it on for size, while Stewart Kennedy presents the keys to their father, Ted Revenberg of Colchester North. Michael, Peter and Catherine joined in the excitement of receiving the super Christmas gift.

Van Service Runs On with Help

Essex Knights of Columbus gave a $1,000 cheque to the social planning council to assist in operating its van for the handicapped and senior citizens. It takes them to doctors' appointments, around town to visit ill relatives, and on shopping trips. The Ontario ministry of community and social service provides half of the funds and such groups as K. of C., Rotary and United Way provide the other half. The K. of C. members held a party for the fifth consecutive year to make the $1,000 cheque possible. Seen at the presentation are Grand Knight Ted Revenberg, Lawrence Chevrier, Tom Heenan, and social planning council members Claudette Gauthier and Earl Heil.

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR REVENBERG

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Revenberg, who were married at St. Joseph's Church, River Canard, will reside in River Canard after their wedding trip to Florida. Mrs. Revenberg is the former Jeannine Bondy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Bondy of RR 2, River Canard, and the bridegroom's parents are the Gerard Revenbergs of RR 1, Oldcastle. Theresa Bondy was maid of honor and Augustin Revenberg was best man.

Farmers Meet Their City Cousins

Essex County farmers had a better-than-ever display for their annual Food Fair in the Devonshire Mall. Response by the public was greater than in past shows and the displays were more attractive. There were product draws, free samples, recipes, and lots of information for all who stopped. The dairy princess, Glenna Howley of Caledonia, guest of the milk producers, was busy pinning promotional buttons on children. Bryan McInnis of Cottam samples one of the 6,000 glasses of milk the producers gave out during the three-day show. Murdo McLean of Harrow pours another glass while Mrs. Tony Revenberg of Oldcastle hands the milk to Bryan who is with his mother, Cheryl McInnis.

Error:

So sorry in last week's issue the banns of marriage read "Agnes" instead of Jacinta Revenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Revenberg and James Gordon Collins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Collins. Agnes Revenberg is already married.

We've learned that the Doctors attending Gerard Revenberg have diagnosed his illness and although still confined to Victoria Hospital, London, "Gerry" has been moved up to 6th floor. Why not all his friends in this community shower him with "Get Well" cards to help him in his hours of confinement.

Those interested in football will be happy to know that Aug. "Augie" Revenberg is again on the Roster, playing for the Ottawa Rough Riders. His number is 63. He was a City-all-star in his High School days, playing for Assumption and also starred for A.K.O. Good luck "Augie" from your friends here.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Market, R.R. 2, Essex, wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Cindy Anne, to Jerry Revenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerry Revenberg, R.R. 1, Oldcastle. The wedding will take place at St. Clements Church, McGregor on Saturday, Oct. 7th at 3 p.m.

Jerry Revenberg and his good wife are beginning to think that years and time sure move and waits for nobody. Mr. and Mrs. Jerry recently were grandparents for the tenth time. Jerry and his good wife reside with their family on the former Arthur Kavanagh farm on South Talbot Road.

Jerry arrived from Holland in the St. Marys area with seven dollars in his jeans and read of the Kavanagh farm for sale in a local paper and here he is a successful farmer with a fine family. Jerry claims he sees more of the Kavanagh tribe now than he did when they were near Sebringville where John Kavanagh and Willie Brockman taught the Easterners to grow corn.

Some of our Canadian youth who claim there is no hope for success in parts of Canada should study people like our Revenbergs who come to this land with nothing. Success sometimes is luck but for most it is hard work study and plain bulldog sticking to business and a hue to the line and a prayer to the Almighty thrown in.

It was a gala day at the Gerard Revenberg home, on South Talbot Road, on Sunday when, surrounded by their family of 13 children and four grandchildren, they celebrated their silver wedding anniversary. The Revenbergs were married in Holland, August 14th, 1941 and came to Canada 15 years ago. Twelve years ago they came to Maidstone, buying the late Arthur Kavanagh Farm. Rev. Fr. J. M. Fogarty read their Mass of Thanksgiving at 11 o'clock, attended by all their family, guests and neighbours. Dinner was served at 1 o'clock, at their home, for the family, their daughter Maria and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. VanDenBerg and children, Leon and Grant, of St. Thomas, and Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Revenberg and children, Catherine Ann and Michael, of Windsor, were here to celebrate with their parents, brothers and sisters. A 6 o'clock dinner was then served for the neighbours and other guests, included Rev. Fr. J. M. Fogarty, Rev. Fr. "Tim" Kavanagh, O.F.M., and Rev. Fr. Menderink, of Sacred Heart Seminary, Delaware; Mrs. Revenberg's three brothers, Tony Willemsen, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Willemsen and five of their children, of Stratford; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Willemsen and three children, of Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. Schiagner, of Sebringville, and Mr. Revenberg's cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Gerry Damen, of London. Friends and neighbours of this community extended sincere good wishes for many more years of good health and happiness and that the Silver will turn to Gold in the next 25 years.

abortion cost job — nurse

By Brian Bannon
Star Medical Reporter

A Colchester North nurse has complained to the Ontario Human Rights Commission that she was fired because she opposes abortion.

Catherine Revenberg worked for Windsor obstetrician Dr. W.K. Lai until July 7 when the two had an angry confrontation in his office over Mrs. Revenberg's behavior and whether abortion is "murder."

She complained to the human rights commission that, "My terms of employment were violated because of my religious belief that abortion is murder."

The commission is studying the case.

Dr. Lai told The Star he fired Mrs. Revenberg because a patient complained she was rude over the telephone.

"I'm not pro-abortion myself. I don't do abortions," he said. But if a woman decides to have one, he sometimes refers her to another doctor who does.

The Irish-born, Roman Catholic mother of six says she isn't fighting to get her job back but over the principle involved.

Not suffering

"We have a comfortable farm (in Colchester North Township). I'm not suffering," she said.

She said Dr. Lai prevented her from giving Christian advice to his patients.

Dr. Lai, who is also a Roman Catholic, said he "bent over backwards to accommodate her."

He said when he first learned of Mrs. Revenberg's views 10 months ago, he instructed his other receptionist to handle all letters and telephone calls dealing with abortion so Mrs. Revenberg's beliefs wouldn't be compromised.

Banns of marriage for Douglas Brown and Lucy Revenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Revenberg, were announced.

Agnes Revenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Revenberg, a grade VIII student at St. Malachy's, met with an accident on Tuesday, at her home, and was rushed by ambulance to Hotel Dieu and is suffering from a fractured skull and broken arm.

JUNE. 13. 1969

Mr. Gerry Revenberg of South Talbot Rd. Oldcastle has returned from a delightful 4 weeks visit in Vancouver with son August and wife Judy and his daughter Gemma and husband John Vandieburg. Son Augie plays "defence" tackle for the B.C. Lions Since therapeutic abortion is legal, he lets the patient decide whether to go ahead, he said, adding it was Mrs. Revenberg's interference that led to her dismissal.

Several other incidents preceded the firing, but Dr. Lai let Mrs. Revenberg go when she told a woman who inquired about an abortion by telephone:

"I am a Roman Catholic and I do not have to discuss abortion with you."

The woman subsequently complained to Dr. Lai.

When he reprimanded her, Mrs. Revenberg told her employer she believes abortion is murder. "How dare you have the impertinence to impose murder on me," she said she told him.

Severance pay

He dismissed her with severance pay.

Mrs. Revenberg is a registered nurse and midwife who worked at the world-famous Mayo Clinic in Minnesota and at Cook County Hospital in Chicago as well as at Hotel Dieu and Grace Hospital in Windsor.

When she applied for the job in Dr. Lai's office 10 months ago, she wasn't told he occasionally refers patients for abortions.

But soon after she began working, she discovered that her duties — besides giving pre-natal advice and doing clerical work — included helping women get abortion referrals.

She said cases were referred to city doctors who perform therapeutic abortions.

"All the revelations were shocking to me.

When you start seeing the files and reading the process that takes place, it's scandalous, uncivilized conduct."

"I feel we did selective killing," she said.

If an abortion was refused by the abortion committee at Windsor Western Hospital, the girl was often referred to Victoria Hospital in London. If that didn't work, she was sent to the Summit Clinic in Detroit, Mrs. Revenberg said.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Tony Revenberg (Jeanine Bondy) on the arrival of their daughter, Monique Louise, 9 lb. 13 oz. on Oct. 17th at Metropolitan Hospital. A sister for Tony, Chris and Nicole.

Some 14

Mrs. Revenberg said she feels many of the young girls, some as young as 14, are not capable of making the decision whether to have an abortion or not.

"I was conscience-stricken," she said.

In October, she talked with Dr. Lai and he agreed that she would not have to make appointments or help in any way with abortion cases.

If any woman who was not a patient called asking for an abortion, she was to be told Dr. Lai did not perform abortions and to call her own family doctor, Mrs. Revenberg said.

But Dr. Lai did occasionally refer his own patients for abortions and Mrs. Revenberg refused to handle any mail she knew involved such cases.

One day several months ago, a woman in tears came into the office with her 15-year-old daughter and Mrs. Revenberg consoled her and gave her the name of a doctor and an organization that oppose abortion.

However, the case ended with an abortion after all, and the woman told the doctor who performed it that the nurse in Dr. Lai's office tried to persuade her to see another doctor. He complained to Dr. Lai and her employer told Mrs. Revenberg to stop trying to turn patients away from his office.

'White lies'

Mrs. Revenberg said she sometimes told patients "white lies." When a stranger called up asking for the name of a doctor who performed abortions, she would say she didn't know of any.

She said she told one girl that she wouldn't tell her where to get the help she sought because "abortion is murder."

Two minutes later, a man telephoned and swore at her, she said.

After her dismissal, Mrs. Revenberg refused to leave Dr. Lai's office until he gave her a written explanation of why she was being fired. She never got one and she left when the work day ended three hours later.

MAIDSTONE CROSS

The banns of marriage were published in St. Mary's Church for Anthony Revenberg, son of Gerard Revenberg and Marie Williamson and Miss Jeannine Bondy, daughter of Clayton Bondy and Mae Dufault, of St. Joseph's Church, River Canard.

MAY. 19. 1969

Mrs. Gerard (Gerry) Revenberg of the former Arthur Kavanagh Farm has returned from Staten Island, New York, where she flew to attend the wake and funeral of her brother Anthony Willemsen, age 38 years, who was killed when he went to enter his car, after work and was killed by a hit and run driver. Deceased is survived by his wife and six small children. Mrs. Revenberg was accompanied by her two brothers. Sincere sympathy is extended to her and her family. R. I. P.

DEC. 18. 1970

Gerry Revenberg was able to be brought home from Victoria Hospital this week after several weeks of illness and two operations. He will convalesce at his home. He wishes to sincerely thank his family, neighbours, relatives and friends for visits, shower of get-well cards, gifts, flowers and many prayers for his recovery. Those expressions of thoughtfulness will always be remembered.

OCT. 1. 1971

Besides contacting the human rights commission, she has also been in touch with the office of Bishop John Sherlock of the Roman Catholic Diocese of London, and a lawyer for Birthright, an organization that opposes abortion.

Dick Reyner, Ray Crawford and Bob Dykens appeared at the Kingsville Athletics Association picnic Sunday with their Shetland Pony drawing teams. The Reyner team walked off with top prize pulling only ten pounds more than the Crawford team. The three local teams also participated in the parade through the town of Kingsville, starting at around 12 o'clock.

END OF AN ERA -- Dick Reyner of RR 1, Oldcastle won't be using his horse team to plow in this year's Essex County Plowing Match. The traditional horse class has been eliminated due to skyrocketing liability insurance premiums.

If you see Dick Reyner walking slightly uneven, Dick is still a little scared from what was almost a serious accident.

Dick and his young nephew were on the way to Harrow with a small pony in the back of their pick-up. Dick's pick-up was demolished by another car rounding a curve near the Tom Foote farm on Walker Road.

Nobody was seriously injured but all were badly shaken up by the impact of a head-on crash. Dick is on the lookout now for another pick-up as his old one is "Kaput" and good for the junk pile he claims.

NOV. 1963

Dick Reyner came home from a horse show at Malden Centre the past week with a trophy.

Dick's pulling team of ponies weighing some 900 pounds, pulled over 2,800 pounds to carry off the title.

Just like Dick himself, little things go a long ways and sometimes pull a lot of weight.

JUNE. 1. 1962

REYNER—Mary Henrietta, 84 years, November 11, 1973, late of 1918 Oneida Ct., formerly of Oldcastle. Predeceased by her husband Harry (1943). Dear mother of Richard, Mrs. John Hackson (Anne) and Mrs. Leslie O'Brien (Lottie), all of Oldcastle and Mrs. Eric Banwell (Lily) of Windsor. 8 grandchildren, 2 great-grandchildren also survive. Predeceased by her granddaughter Mary Ellen O'Brien (1971). Dear sister of Fred Rhoads and Mrs. Frank Wallace (Stella) of Windsor. Resting at the Anderson Funeral Home, 895 Ouellette Ave. Will rest at St. Stephen's Anglican Church from 11 a.m. Wednesday, November 14 until 1 p.m. (time of service), Rev. N. A. Tilford officiating. Interment St. Stephen's Churchyard.

Joan Kathryn, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Reyner and Mary Elizabeth, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill O'Neil were baptized at the Church of the Redeemer, Sunday morning with the Rev. J. E. G. Houghton officiating. Joan's godparents were Mr. and Mrs. Leslie O'Brien and Mrs. Eric Banwell and Mary Elizabeth's were Mr. and Mrs. Gerald O'Neil. Family dinners following the christenings.

Redeemer Guild will honour Mrs. H. Reyner with a party on the occasion of her 80th birthday, August 13th at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Leslie O'Brien, beginning at 1:30 p.m. A cordial invitation is extended to all her friends to join with the Guild in making this a memorable day for Mrs. Reyner.

Plan to attend the Garden Party, Wednesday evening, September 3rd on the St. Stephen's Rectory lawns and car park. There will probably be a White Elephant Attic Clearing, anything and everything Auction Sale, dance for the Young People, films, food and fun for everyone.

Will Reside in Oldcastle

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD HARRY REYNER

Reyner-Trimble Vows Spoken

At a quiet but lovely ceremony the Rev. Joseph Tully united in marriage, Miss Helen Margaret Trimble, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Trimble of Cotnam, and Mr. Richard Harry Reyner, only son of Mrs. Harry Reyner of Oldcastle and the late Mr. Reyner.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Donald Trimble, was lovely in a gown of white nylon net over taffeta, with a lace jacket having tiny satin buttons down the front, a scalloped peplum and long sleeves which formed points over her hands. Her veil was held to her head with a beaded tiara and she carried red roses.

Mrs. Donald Trimble, as matron of honor, was charming in a gown of yellow lace and nylon, with a matching headpiece and gloves.

Mr. Bruce Malott was best man.

Nab Thugs

Fast work between local Oldcastlers and Essex and Provincial Police nabbed two would be thieves, wanted by Windsor Police here over the weekend. Leaving the local Coffee Shop and China Shop owned by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rice and carrying stolen goods, the thieves were stopped at Essex by Constable Johnson of the town police. Constable Johnson received license number telephoned him by Mr. Rice.

Lawrence Fairbairn, 24 and Allen Murphy 30, both of Windsor were later identified by Mr. and Mrs. Rice and Sam Jessop, a customer, at the time the pilfering was in progress.

Both men were charged in County Court, Windsor, Monday.

MAY. 1. 1959

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rice, of the Variety Shop, celebrated a wedding anniversary the past week. We are not sure how many, but Joe claims "it's a long time to live with one woman." Lottie claims "it's a darn sight longer to live with one man, and she still won't tolerate no back talk." Bravo for the weaker sex, Lottie.

NOV. 28. 1958

Thieves broke into the Bell Telephone pay booth at Rice's Variety Shop early in the week. Telephone box was ripped from the wall and stripped of its contents. Reports are also that the police also picked up some suspects in on this job.

JULY. 15. 1960

Mrs. Lottie Rice, of the Oldcastle Variety Shop, has an extra gleam in her eye this week, and also is tripping around with a starry-eyed look. Lottie won herself a permanent wave at Chatham the other night, by being able to find the right place on the floor in a spot dance.

FEB. 21. 1958

Some of locals are experiencing trouble with the molars the past week. Mrs. Joe Rice, of the Oldcastle Variety Shop, has not been her lively self this week because of infection following an extraction.

Joe Perrin is back at the helm after some teeth extractions.

SEPT. 27. 1957

Hamburger eaters and coffee breakers that pass by at the Oldcastle Variety Shop, are happy that Mrs. Joe Rice is back on the job again. Lottie, who serves the local gangsters, started out with teeth infection and ended up with a flu bug to top her illness off. Ray Fairbairn and his buddy, "Stacey," our prominent butchers and good musicians as well, serenaded Lottie's return with the guitar, mouth organ and violin, the other night. Card playing ended the night's festivities and now husband Joe says he will give lessons on euchre, as well as help his Lottie with the hamburgers.

NOV. 15. 1957

Tom Strays

Old Tom a wandering cat has caused a stir around the business district of the Oldcastlers the past week. Tom at first was a gift to the Co-op by one of its customers but he wandered to what he thought was better stamping grounds at the Variety Gift Shop.

American tourists also took a fancy to Tom and was believed to have hitched a ride across the border when coaxed into their car. Police were notified that tourists at Greenwich took off with Tom and it is believed that Tom was returned home to the Gift Shop of Joe and Lottie Rice.

Mr. and Mrs. Rice now believe that Tom has become an outright bum since his return because the wanderer seems to be on the bum again.

Co-op employees once tried to return Tom to his first home but Tom scratched his original owners and refused to come home. Who knows maybe all Tom needs is a wife and family to settle him down.

SEPT. 5. 1958

We are glad to report Mrs. Joe Rice (Lottie) of Cottam is recovering from a major operation at Leamington Hospital and is now home. From reports our Lottie has about thirty gall stones to display. Lottie, how could one be so stoned and be so ambitious all these years, usually when one is stoned that bad they get a little more than just dizzy, they are stewed.

Lottie is the sister of our Oldcastle Postmaster, Jack Tasker.

NOV. 24. 1967

Mrs. Howard Hunter and daughter, Gayle, of Inglewood, California, have been visiting the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rice. Mrs. Hunter is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rice.

MAY. 3. 1957

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rice, former residents of the Variety Shop, have moved to their new home near Cottam.

SEPT. 1. 1961

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Dibley were both shaken up in a car crash the past week. Mr. Dibley is a mechanic at "Hank" Thrasher's place at Paquette. Mrs. Dibley is a sister of Mrs. Joe Rice, now of Cottam.

Joe Rice is back in circulation following a bout with the flu. Friends in the coffee drinking circles, at the Variety Shop, claim Joe just gets lonesome for the boys.

Aug 24 - 1956

Mr & Mrs. Rice, former residents of Merlin have leased the A.D. Kavanagh store and gift shop. Mr & Mrs. Kavanagh will still maintain their post office in the Kavanagh home.

RICE—Joseph, of Cottam, Ontario, age 76 years, at Leamington Memorial Hospital, July 15, 1972. Surviving are his wife, Lottie; daughters, Mrs. Josephine Hunter, California; Mrs. Howard (Rose) Walker, Wheatley; sisters, Mrs. Victoria Riddell, Chatham; Mrs. Anna Wallace, Chatham; Mrs. Emma Gill, Cleveland; brothers, Patrick, Chatham; George, Fletcher; William, Detroit. 5 grandchildren, 2 great-grandchildren. Services at the Second-Jones Funeral Home, Merlin, Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. Burial Merlin Cemetery. Contributions to the Canadian Cancer Society would be appreciated.

JULY. 17. 1972

Mr. and Mrs. Rice, former residents of Merlin, have leased the A. D. Kavanagh store and gift shop. Mr. and Mrs. Kavanagh will still maintain their post office in the Kavanagh home.

We welcome Mr. and Mrs. Rice to the community and glad to see A. D. and Maw Kavanagh take a deserved rest from a business that was friendly and accommodating.

AUG. 24. 1956

Last Wednesday evening the members of the Co-op staff accorded Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rice, of the Variety Shop, a going away party. Mr. and Mrs. Rice will be soon leaving to take over a new home at Cottam.

Mrs. Rice's brother, Jack Tasker will take over management of the Variety Shop. We hope that all the former coffee sippers and hamburger chompers will welcome Mr. Tasker here.

"Joe" claims he has instructed the new owner to use more floor-sweepings in the coffee.

Oldcastle is back to normal now because the Oldcastle Variety Shop is back in business after about a month of being closed.

Lottie and Joe Rice, the owners, have returned after a yuletide holiday at Inglewood, California. Returning from about a temperature of balmy 80 degrees to a low in the county of almost zero was a change for our local travellers.

Joe of course got a blast from his pet cat with a long drawn out "Meow," wanting to know, "Where in the — have you been all this time?" Lottie has changed to a new look from her rest and also now from the bikini bathing suit to her pert coffee-spotted apron.

Most of the bacon and egg grinders and coffee sluggers are happy about the whole thing and are back matching for the drinks.

Monday morning saw Bert Collins, the Oldcastle Co-op mail courier, stopped for his first coffee in almost a month. Of course as usual Bob McCord, local mechanic, Fred Willis, horse trainer, and Sam Weston, butcher, were tossing as usual and only one man can win and that is Sam Weston. Most of the local beef eaters claim that Sam carries a nickel that has five heads on it.

2 Charged In TheftMerchant Loses Twelve Knives

Two Windsor men were charged today with the theft of 12 penknives from an Oldcastle service station and variety shop Sunday. They were remanded to May 4 for plea and released on their own recognizance.

Lawrence Fairburn, 24, of 1477 Felix Ave., Allan Murphy, 30, of 1135 Campbell Ave., were arrested after buying gas at a service station operated by Joseph Rice.

Mr. Rice told police that he missed 12 penknives after Fairburn and Murphy had left. He gave police the licence number of the car they were driving.

Down at the Variety Shop of the Rices, Sunday morning, the local gas-house gang are congregating for coffee. Local problems and world problems have been discussed pro and con over Joe's brew. Maybe the discussions don't help the weather but Joe's brew at least seems to make a guy feel better. Sam Weston says there is more people congregating at the coffee shop than there is in church and all we need is somebody to take the sermon.

Ditches in the local community along with basement sump-pumps have had a busy week getting rid of excess water. In fact sooner or later some of the ditches that raise a heavy crop of cat-tails will have to be dredged out to carry the water away faster. New poisons have been used on some ditches on the cat-tails and has proved successful.

She puts up a fenced-in fight

By Lloyd McLachlan
Star Municipal Reporter

Amid the early-morning breakfast clutter of her tiny kitchen, Mrs. Orma Richmond began to sob softly.

Workers outside her Banwell Road home were putting up a fence a few feet from the house, separating the property from an historic Sandwich South Township cemetery.

For Mrs. Richmond, a 69-year-old widowed epileptic, it was another blow in her fight to retain a 15-foot strip of land beyond the fence line.

Orma Richmond fights fence

Fence row runs by house

WINDSOR STAR, OCTOBER 28, 1978

"We're not going to let them put it (the fence) up," Mrs. Richmond, a slight, gray-haired woman, said softly.

Mrs. Richmond claims she owns the land that Sandwich South Township says is part of the cemetery.

She said she and her late husband took care of the strip of land and cut the grass. We treated as part of our property, she said.

If the fence stays up, "it won't be like home any more. At my age, I hate to think of moving."

Mrs. Richmond said she hasn't given up her fight to keep the property. A lawyer is working on her case.

Roch Boisvenue, clerk of Sandwich South township, said the property was surveyed and the fence is being erected on a line according to the survey.

If there is a dispute, the matter will have to be decided by a court, Boisvenue said.

The township owns the cemetery and is responsible for its maintenance.

In the midst of the controversy is a Windsor man, Robert Smith, who claims the cemetery is the site of a settlement of former slaves. Smith, who says his father and grandparents are among those buried in the cemetery, wants the five-acre site fenced for security.

Outside the Richmond house, located on 10 acres north of County Road 42, geese cackle and ducks scurry around a fenced-in area nearby. The cow Mrs. Richmond milks every morning at 7 a.m. grazes in a field.

The menagerie also includes several cats, dogs and birds. "People just drop them off. We try to find a home for them," she explained.

Mrs. Richmond also rents stalls for horses.

She and her late husband, former Windsor residents, purchased the Banwell Road property for their retirement years in 1968.

"We wanted a little place in the country. We chose this because it just seemed to be the ideal place."

Shortly before her husband's death, Mrs. Richmond's daughter, Catherine Dean, moved in to care for the couple. She and her two sons, aged 11 and 12, still live at the house.

Mrs. Richmond's income consists of a monthly old-age security cheque, and her daughter receives mother's allowance payments.

To cut costs, the family grows vegetables in a garden and stores them in a freezer. Enough is produced to last the winter because the house is snowed in for lengthy periods.

"It's tough," Mrs. Dean said.

Mrs. Richmond said she has considered selling her home because of the boundary dispute, but she claims it "was just a passing thought."

"I don't think I'll ever move. Not when you've bought a little place to retire on, and your husband built it up."

"I have no desire to move."

Robinson Gathering

For the first time in eight years the family of Rosemary and Russell Robinson had a pork barbecue and pot luck supper when Capt. James P. Robinson, wife Shirley and daughter Michelle of air force base Greenwood, Nova Scotia were home for 10 days. The gathering was held at the home of Ed and Collette Robinson on what was the site of the family farm. Pat and husband Ron Rounding who have recently moved to Windsor from Forest, along with other family members, Margaret and husband John Lacroque, Neil and Rose Robinson, Shirley and Joe Steinhoff, Gerald and Ryan Chittle welcomed aunts, uncles and cousins from Michigan, Sarnia, Windsor, Forest and Essex.

The young girl present was 10 month old Jessica Dyotte, daughter of Rosemary Dyotte and granddaughter of Lloyd and Erma Heil of Essex. Youngest boy was 2 month old Bobby MacMillan, son of Charlene and Rob MacMillan of Forest, and youngest grandchild of Ron and Pat Rounding.

Best horseshoe players were Paul Robinson of Mt. Clemens, Mich. and John Lacroque of Oldcastle. Flying highest kite were two of the older kids, Ron Rounding and Joe Steinhoff. Bringing kite down the fastest was Ed Robinson, who did it with a BANG.

About 40 people enjoyed a delicious meal and a day of pleasant reflections with the family. We all thank God we had the opportunity to get together.

Rosemary was kept busy with Remember When?. Russell could not be present all day due to a prior engagement.

The oldest man present was Bill Bridgen Sr. and oldest 'young' lady was Lillian Lachin, both of Essex, and who both celebrate birthdays on August 13th. Neither was telling ages.

IN MEMORIAM

ROBINSON - In loving memory of Gerald Robinson, who passed away 26 years ago, November 19, 1948.

Fondly loved and deeply mourned

Heart of hearts, we miss Jerry so Often our darling, our tears will flow

Dimming your picture before eyes

But never the one in our hearts that lies

The stars seem dim as we whisper low

Our own darling Jerry we miss you so

Always remembered by Mom, Dad, Sisters Patsy, Glendora, Margaret and Darcy; brothers Jimmy, Neil, Eddy and families.

She ushers, so that she can see all the new productions and stage shows. She has worked as telephone volunteer for Channel 56. She loves to travel and is planning a trip to Europe in the next two years. Her hobbies include sewing, gardening and playing golf.

Ms. Salusky is enthusiastically looking forward to the challenge of her new position and serving the community of Richmond, Michigan.

Donna is the daughter of Mrs. Norma Palmeroy (nee Robinson) of Mt. Clemens, and the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Robinson of R.R. #1, Maidstone, Ontario

Robinson-Greenough Wedding

A wedding of interest took place Saturday, April 20th, at St. John the Evangelist Roman Catholic Church, at Windsor, Nova Scotia, when Miss Shirley Winnifred Greenough, of Kentville, Nova Scotia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Greenough, became the bride of Flight Officer Jas. Paul Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Robinson, of Maidstone. The parish priest, the Rev. Fr. Laba, officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor length gown of Narazar and taffeta styled with a fitted bodice and scoop neckline. The long tapering sleeves ended in lily points over the hands. The skirt was in the new forward look design, with bouffant back. The three tiered bouffant veil of silk illusion was enhanced with a crown of sequins. She wore the gift of the groom, a pearl neckline and she carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Mrs. Robinson was attended by Mrs. Archie MacKichon, of Halifax, N. S., as matron of honour and her bridesmaids, her sister-in-law, Mrs. Graham Greenough, of Kentville, N. S., and Mrs. Frank MacNeil, of Greenwood, N. S. Each attendant wore gold velvet gowns with matching accessories and each carried bouquets of white carnations.

Cyril Hatter, of Summerside, P. E. I., assisted the groom and the ushers were Frank MacNeil, of Greenwood, N. S. and Robert Connel, of Summerside.

The bride's mother was lovely in a blue gown, with beige accessories and the groom's mother chose a turquoise gown with beige accessories and both wore corsages of pink and white carnations.

A reception in the Church Hall, at Brooklyn, N. S., for 125 guests from Ontario, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The happy young couple are honeymooning in Ontario and will reside at the R. C. A. F. station in Greenwood, N. S., where the groom is stationed as an Instructor. The bride travelled in a gold coloured suit and rose accessories. The groom attended Essex District High School before joining the Air Force.

Family Reunion at Leamington

The shaded lawns of Seacliffe Park, Leamington, provided a lovely background for the 31st annual reunion of the descendants of John and Margaret Heil, who were early pioneer residents of Maidstone Township. Some 85 members travelled long distances especially to attend the reunion. The award for travelling the longest distance was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Eric Youngson (Helen Dell) of Hayden Lake, Idaho, formerly of Windsor. Others who came from a distance were Jacob Heil of Cambridge, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson McEwin, Mrs. Edith Teal and Mrs. Lillian Companion all of the London-Stratford area. Messages were received from several members who were unable to attend the reunion.

Winning the award for the largest family present were the G. Limanek's of Windsor. Awards were presented to the eldest lady Mrs. John (Vera) Heil and she also won an award for perfect attendance at all of the 31 reunions. Mrs. Edna Anger of South Woodslee received a gift for being the second eldest lady. The eldest man was Jacob Heil of Cambridge, formerly of Cottam, and the second eldest was Geo. Tonks of Wheatley, and both men received gifts. The prize for the youngest member present was won by wee Stacey Michelle Herman, who at five months of age, slept soundly in her stroller throughout the afternoons festivities. A surprise gift was presented to Miss T. Leroux and Mrs. S. McKenzie, an engaged couple. Married for the longest number of years (57) was Mr. and Mrs. Wilson McEwin (Mable Hutchison). Jacob Heil asked the blessing at dinner and everyone did justice to the bountifully laden picnic tables. Later a time of fellowship, reminiscing and picture-taking took place. Following this, a variety of children and adult games took place under the able direction of James Dell of Windsor. The winners of the games were John and Adam Heil, Don and Jason Earhart, Richard McFarland, Jamie Herman, Jody Gagnon, Teresa, Marguerite and Lash Leroux, Natalie and Sylvie Heil, Scott McKenzie and Mark and Barry Limanek. The egg contest was won by Helen and Eric Youngson, and the runners-up were Brenda and Geo. Heil, Berniece Donnelly, Rosemary Dytte, Don and Selina Heil, Edward and Flossie Dell, Barry Limanek, Earl and Adeline Heil and Douglas Culver. Guessing the correct number of jelly beans in a jar was George Heil. Everyone enjoyed ice cream treats before departing for their homes. Mr. and Mrs. George Heil of Leamington volunteered to sponsor the 1985 reunion which will be held on the last Sunday in June at Leamington.

The gift of life is blood

The National Rare Blood Donors listing got some help Thursday from two donors in the Windsor area—Mrs. Rosemary Robinson, left, Maidstone, and Mrs. Veronica Wilson, 775 Moy Ave. Both gave blood at the Red Cross clinic.

The blood was taken in special containers to the deep-freeze depot in Ottawa, where it is kept for use in emergencies in Canada or abroad. It is also for use by the department of national defence.

The blood is of the low frequency pheno type. Mrs. Robinson's blood is B Group, Rh Positive. Mrs. Wilson's blood is generally the same, but contains some elements which are different.

Mrs. Wilson is a niece of Mrs. Robinson.

They are among the few who are called upon to keep the national rare-blood bank at the required level.

Earl Evans Robinson 1924-1945

Earl Robinson was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Robinson formerly of R.R. #1 Maidstone, Ontario. He received his education at the old #5 Public School in Sandwich South Township and at the Essex District High School. He enlisted in the U.S. Navy and received his training at the Great Lakes Naval Station at Chicago, Illinois. He later was posted to the South Pacific area aboard the destroyer H.S.S. Mannert L. Abele. Earl was lost at the Battle of Okinawa on April 12, 1945. Here is posted the citation received by his parents from Franklin Delano Roosevelt, president of the United States of America: In grateful memory of Earl Evans Robinson who died in the Service of his country at Sea, Asiatic area, attached H.S.S. Mannert L. Abele, 12 April, 1945. He stands in the unbroken line of patriots who have dared to die that freedom might live and grow and increase its Blessings. Freedom lives, and through it, he lives -- in a way that humbles the undertakings of most men.

PLANT 1.

Wesenger-Robinson Wedding.

In a double-ring ceremony at St. James Westminster Anglican Church, London, Rev. Canon Merifield recently united in marriage Ronald Bruce Wesenger, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Wesenger, of London, and Miss Grace Eleanor Robinson, daughter of Milford Robinson, of Oldcastle. George Black was the organist and Miss Jacqueline Newton the soloist.

Given in marriage, by her father, the bride was lovely in a waltz-length gown of pink and white organza over taffeta; with appliques of lace; seeded pearls, on skirt; a rose point chantilly lace bodice; long sleeves forming points; a French illusion shoulder-length veil, held by a tiara, trimmed with embroidery and seeded pearls. She carried a white Bible, topped by orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Marilyn Wesenger, a sister of the groom, was maid of honor and Miss Marilyn Radcliffe, bridesmaid. They chose identical gowns of pink organza over pink taffeta, with pink tiaras and wore corsages of white baby mums and pink gladioli.

The two flower girls, little Peggy Libby, of Oldcastle, a cousin of the bride and Kimberley Ann Dale, of London, a niece of the groom, were dressed in pinafore styled dresses of pink and white organza and carried baskets of pink sweetheart roses.

Henry J. Knowles, of London, was best man and the ushers were Harold Robinson, of Oldcastle, brother of the bride; Dwight Wesenger, a brother of the groom.

The church was decorated for the occasion with candelabra and bouquets of white gladioli, with mums marking the guest pews; tall burning tapers, and baskets of large white mums and gladioli at the chancel steps.

At the dinner reception, held at Cobblestone Inn, Miss Violet Robinson, of Oldcastle, aunt of the bride, chose a dress of ice blue marguissette over taffeta and wore a corsage of pink roses; Miss Pearl Robinson, of Windsor, also an aunt of the bride, chose a dress of teal blue chantilly lace, with white accessories and wore a corsage of white roses; and Mrs. Wesenger wore a dress of Dior blue Peau de soie, with black accessories and wore a corsage of yellow roses.

For her wedding trip to Northern Ontario, the bride travelled in a silk shantung dress with matching duster, white accessories and wore an orchid corsage.

Out of town guests were from Toronto, Hamilton, North Bay, Chatham, Detroit, Windsor, Essex, Cotnam, Maidstone Cross and Oldcastle.

A Thursday evening fire heavily damaged a Sandwich South Township house on the Baseline Road about a mile south of the Windsor Airport.

Bernard Robinson, his family and visiting friends escaped the fire without injury.

The Sandwich South fire department was called to the scene about 10 p.m. and called for assistance from the Anderdon Township fire department a few minutes later.

The fire apparently started in a recently completed addition in the back of the house. Initial reports indicate the gas furnace or gas dryer may have been the cause.

The family was in the den in the front of the house when the fire was discovered.

Bill Brackell said he and his grandson had stopped by for a visit at the Robinsons on their way home.

"We were in the den, and all of a sudden the smoke just came in on us from over the door," he said.

Robinson grabbed the phone and called the fire department, while Brackell and his grandson, Mrs. Robinson and her three children ran outside.

The fire department was on the scene several hours extinguishing the stubborn fire in the ceiling. The rear area of the house was blackened by the flames and there was smoke damage to the front area of the home.

Dan L. McLean of Toronto, returned down from Sarnia on Tuesday evening to have dinner with his mother and sister Clare.

Mrs. Thomas Mullin wishes to bid a fond farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Manley Robinson, of Hwy. 114, who have lived in this community for over 16 years. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson will reside in Brampton. Jerry and Richard both attended St. Joseph's School and later graduated from Essex High School. Jerry will continue to teach in Amherstburg; Richard will reside in Windsor and further his studies at the University of Windsor. These kind people have been liked by all, and will be greatly missed in Maidstone, our loss is Brampton's gain. Best wishes for your health and happiness and may God bless you.

JUNE 5, 1964

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Robinson on their recent marriage. Richard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Robinson, who formerly lived on Hwy. 114. His bride is the former Marlene Marie Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hodgins of R.R. 6 Brampton. Both are teaching in Brampton. Richard is an Essex High School Graduate and is well known and very well known in this community where he lived in his youth. Many years of happiness.

Mrs. Harold C. Robinson, of the 8th Con. along with her mother who is 80 years young, have left for a three months vacation to England. Since arriving in Canada this is Mrs. Robinson's first trip back to the homeland and dear old "Bligahty".

Mrs. Robinson expects also to meet a girl friend whom she has corresponded with for many years from Australia who also will arrive in England about the same time.

"Hubby" Harold says it gets a little lonesome without the little battle-axe but there is nothing like doing dishes to keep a man's mind occupied.

MAIDSTONE

A very happy gathering was held in Maidstone United Church hall, on Wednesday evening, when friends and relatives met to honour Mrs. Leah Robinson, who is leaving shortly to make her home with her daughter in Hamilton. Mrs. Robinson spent practically all her life in this community, and her hospitality and kind helpfulness will long be remembered by a large circle of friends. Her activities in the church have been varied and many. Her special interest was the Mission Band, having been active in this work for many years. She was superintendent of the Mission Band for over 35 years. A short program was enjoyed, consisting of readings by Miss Myrtle Kennedy and Mrs. Thomas Cunningham; vocal solos by Mrs. Arnold Axcell; duets by Donna and Gary Wright. An address was read by Mrs. William Libby, expressing the deep esteem in which Mrs. Robinson is held by her fellow church members, her relatives and other friends. Presentations were made on behalf of the various organizations, and also from her family. She wore a beautiful corsage, the gift of the Mission Circle. Rev. Nathaniel Anderson spoke in appreciation of the deep Christian character, always evident in Mrs. Robinson's life. A beautiful luncheon was served.

Valentine

More than 250 guests enjoyed "hearty" hospitality at the Valentine Tea sponsored by the Essex Auxiliary for Senior Citizens at the Essex Nursing Home. Cupids flew along the walls of the diningroom and hall and lacy valentines decorated odd corners. Residents of the home took turns in pouring tea. These ladies wore corsages of fresh flowers donated by the auxiliary.

Pouring tea were: Mrs. Duncan, Mrs. Herries, Miss Josephine Robinson, Mrs. St. Louis, Miss Wilson, Mrs. LeBlanc, and Mrs. Jacobson. Convenor of the tea, Mrs. Jenny Vanveen expressed to the many who helped with the occasion the sincere thanks of the auxiliary. A committee of volunteers made kleenex boutonnieres for all residents of the home.

Many of those attending took out memberships in the auxiliary. Membership at one dollar a year is available on an active or associate basis. The Kiwanis have enrolled their entire membership at one dollar a year in a body. The auxiliary would welcome other organizations in the same way.

More volunteers are needed to work on the telephone, driving and mending committees. Those interested should telephone Mrs. Jenny VanVeen, 776-8507.

Dick Clarkin, committee member, urged other men to volunteer as home visitors, as men residents would appreciate their companionship.

VALENTINE JOYS Mrs. Mabel Noble visited with Mrs. Grace Herries and Miss Josephine Robinson as they poured tea for the continual stream of guests at the tea in Essex Nursing Home. Little Lisa Hergott sits on Miss Robinson knee. Two of the girls who helped prepare the tea are Elizabeth Meyer and Ann Van Veen.

At four o'clock Saturday afternoon at Sun Parlour Home, Sandwich South lost one of their highly respected citizens, Miss Margaret Mary Robinson R.N. (lovingly known as Mame) passed peacefully away after a lingering illness. Born Feb. 14th, 1885 daughter of the late Michael Robinson Sr. and Mary Fahey, deceased had resided on the home place, corner of North Talbot Road and 8th Concession, until her last illness. She was graduated from Mercy Hospital, Denver, Colorado in 1911 as a Registered Nurse and followed her profession for well over 60 years and made hundreds of friends with her loving efficient services. Had been a supervisor for years at Hotel Dieu Hospital, also a Windsor School Nurse, private-duty nurse and then in her waning years took care of senior citizens in her own home. For 26 months she nursed Breen Hogan back from a crippling polio. Blessed with a pleasing easy-going personality, she is mourned by a host of friends. Deceased was pre-deceased by a sister Elizabeth, Mrs. Con Beahan (Apr. 1962) and two brothers, Michael (Dec. 1967) and John (Sept. 1969). Left to mourn her passing are three sisters, Ellen, Mrs. Edward Hurley, Miss Josephine Robinson and Rose, Mrs. George Hergott, all of 98 Hwy. and 6 nieces and 5 nephews and grand nieces and nephews. Funeral was held Wednesday morning from Janisse Bros. Funeral Home to St. Mary's Church at 10 o'clock with the Rev. A. P. Marentette officiating. Burial in Family Plot, St. Mary's Cemetery. R. I. P.

Miss Robinson was Charter President of St. Mary's Cemetery Board until her illness and acted as Executive of C. W. L. She also belonged to St. Mary's Altar Society and League of the Sacred Heart and a faithful member of St. Mary's Parish.

Congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. G. Robinson (nee Mavis Herdman) whose marriage was an event of Saturday, July 16, at 7 p.m., in St. Stephen's Church, with Rev. Gordon Houghton officiating.

JULY. 22. 1955

Michael W. Robinson, born December 6th, 1886, second son of the late Michael Robinson and Mary Agnes Fahey, of the North Talbot Road and Eighth Concession of Sandwich South, where he was born and lived all his life, passed away at Metropolitan Hospital, Thursday evening at seven o'clock from a kidney condition. A quiet, unassuming man, he had many, many friends. He was a farmer and retired a few years ago. In his early years, he hired out, on the M.C.R.R. and worked their until the morning of January 20th, 1921, when his friend and neighbour, Charlie Battersby, lost his life on the hump. Deceased was an ardent baseball fan and followed the Detroit Tigers and Shamrocks, ardently, and also the Red Wings. His sister, Elizabeth, Mrs. Con Beahan, predeceased him April, 1962. Left to mourn his passing is his brother, John, of Riverview Hospital; Miss M. M. (Mame) Robinson, R.N., of Leamington; Mrs. Ellen Hurley, Miss Josephine Robinson, and Rose, Mrs. George Hergott, all of Highway 98; nieces and nephews, Leo and William Robinson, Francis Beahan, Mrs. Monica St. Louis all of Windsor; Mrs. Bessie Duncan, R.N., of Texas; Mrs. Julia Campbell, Miss Lyola, Miss Rosemary (R.N.) and Albert Beahan, all of Highway 98, and Robert and Miss Mary Hergott, of Highway 98 and grand nieces and nephews. Funeral was held Tuesday morning from Janisse Bros. Funeral Home to St. Mary's Church with the Pastor, Rev. Fr. J. M. Fogarty officiating. Burial was in the Family Plot of St. Mary's Cemetery. The pallbearers were two nephews, Albert Beahan and Robert G. Hergott; a cousin, Harold Robinson and three friends, Frank J. McCloskey, Ralph Sexton and Gerard McCarthy. Mr. Robinson was a faithful member of St. Mary's Parish and belonged to the Holy Name Society and St. Mary's Altar Society. R.I.P.

The land had been farmland owned by Michael Robinson who farmed it until he died then it was taken over by Harold Robinson his eldest son and he and Violet his sister lived in the Robinson home. Mr. Crawford bought 14 acres off the farm following the death of Harold and Violet the whole farm was broken up into parcels and sold entirely to various industries after the Industrial mall was established in Sand South and a street named Olympic Drive was put through separating Mrs. Crawford's 14 acres from the rest. Later there were several roads named after Councillors put through the farmland.

Harold and Violet never married.

OLDCASTLE

Most of this area's sports was confined to baseball but just in case you forgot this area once had a champion hockey club back in the dirty thirties.

Johnny Robinson, who now coaches bad boys at the Essex County Jail, once led a fine bunch of hockey players called Roselanders to the Windsor Civic League title.

Bill Gibb, who courted Maple Croft to wedded bliss and now lives in the U.S. is still around, and interested in sports was once one of the famous county-city club that took some of the Windsor city leaguers.

Bill and Bert Libby, Red Duggan, "Marsh" Jessop, the Robinson brothers, George and Lytle; Andy Weir, the Jensen brothers, Art and Bill and others graced this good amateur club.

Most of the games were played following the Windsor Bulldog games so one could see two games for the price of one and burn the midnight oil at the same time.

Essex Scottish, policemen, firemen, teachers, hydro, all had teams in this league and regardless of a little bruising now and then it was good amateur hockey. you for not knowing what verb modified a noun or what battle was fought in 1815.

The Windsor Arena at that time was considered the coldest spot this side of Alaska for a pressman who forgot his long underwear.

We think if we had paid less attention to local sports and local heroes and dinned more into the grammar and mathematics the depression could be forgotten and the king's english would sound better today.

Most of us would do it all over again just to watch John chew match sticks if the club was off or cut loose with a roar if the team scored a much needed goal.

Just to watch George Robinson hand out a stiff University of Toronto body check or Bill Gibb sail into the net with a goal, or Bill Jensen kick out a good save and tricky Andy Weir fool a defense never compared to how much a teacher pounded We all meet our Waterloo.

Jail lock preserved

Part of Hiram Walker Museum collection

The original corridor lock of the Essex County Jail is to be preserved as part of the Hiram Walker Museum Collection.

It was in use as early as 1855. It has now been mounted on a special Centennial Project map of the county, the work of jail maintenance officer Albery Girard. The old lock was replaced in 1964.

Governor of the jail, John M. Robinson, thought the ancient lock should be retained because it represents the earlier type security locks which guarded the corridor between the jail and the courthouse when the two buildings were in one section.

The mounting, a miniature of a county map, was designed by Officer Girard.

It is being offered to the Walker Museum as part of the mounting number of county artifacts being collected through the years. It is in an excellent state of preservation, complete with the large brass key handled by jailers through the years.

Word this week is out that Governor John Robinson, of the Essex County Jail, will retire in May. John's host of friends without a doubt will wish him the best of luck and a long needed rest from the world of bad boys and keys, locks and bars. Essex County without any doubt will lose a man that will be hard to replace and very big shoes to fill in the job that our old telephone lineman, baseball coach and long time friend held.

There are few men in Essex County that have devoted so much of his life to the good of this county, especially the youth, whether it be on the baseball diamond, the hockey arena or giving sound advise to a erring youth behind jail bars.

John, as we knew him all life, could be stern, hew to the line of life but fair and honest as any old North Essex Baseball Leaguer secretary or ball player or manager will well remember. Rules were rules, not to be broken by the bully or the coniver. Men would argue, rant and rave but in the end the chips fell where John decided they would according to the rules of the game of sports or life and his friends from here to Moonstone, France or Essex County and the Province of Ontario respected him for it.

No doubt the change in youth has puzzled John and just as big a puzzle to others, the long hair, young Hitlers that have no respect for law, authority and manners of a cave man. Old fashioned advise, religion and taking part in sports has to be turned over to the head shrinkers, fast cars, and on to the moon and ending up in left field with black eyes and a foul ball.

We doubt if "Johnny" will go to mould in his retiring because there is still lots of fishing spots and kids who want to be coached to make Bobby Hulls or Babe Ruths or Maidstone Shamrocks done the old time way.

Robinson House unlocks door to prison reform

By Gary Rennie

Star Court Reporter

Robinson House, a home without bars for sentenced prisoners, is almost ready to open.

All it needs are five fire doors and an occupancy permit from the city's building department.

Victor Villeneuve, superintendent of the Windsor Provincial Jail, said he hoped the doors would be installed this week and the occupancy permit issued soon after.

ROBINSON HOUSE is just that — a large house at 523 Caron Ave., which will be home for as many as 10 men serving short sentences for non-violent crimes.

The rationale behind Robinson House is the belief that many prisoners would benefit more from serving their time in a home-like setting where they would receive counselling while continuing to work, attend school, or take part in rehabilitative programs.

The alternative is the institutional setting of the Windsor Jail and the chance to meet some of the area's worst criminals.

For some first offenders, the shock of going to jail creates so much stress that suicide and heart attacks are not uncommon. Both have occurred at the Windsor Jail.

FOR SUCH PEOPLE, community resource centres such as Robinson House have been built across the province the past six or seven years. Windsor hasn't had a similar facility since Mill House closed in July, 1978.

The planning for Robinson House started about 15 months ago. A non-profit company was formed with a board of local lawyers, businessmen and concerned citizens. The company, Robinson House Inc., signed agreements with the provincial correctional services ministry to run the house.

Jim Lawrenson, local director of the Ontario Legal Aid Program, is chairman of the board of directors.

Villeneuve and Mike Marks, area manager for probation and parole, serve as advisers to the board.

THE HOUSE WAS purchased by the correctional services ministry for $50,000 and remodelled for another $31,000. Some of the inmates at the jail helped with the work.

The house will require an annual operating budget of about $110,000, also funded by the ministry. Inmates who are working will pay room and board.

Violet Burns is director of the house and Walter McGuigan the assistant director. A staff consisting of a cook, secretary, and four counsellors, also has been hired.

Robinson House is named after a former governor of the Windsor Jail, John Robinson, who won the respect and friendship of inmates as well as those involved in enforcing the law in his 22-year career. Robinson, who retired in 1967, died last March.

Retiring governor cites frustrations

Essex County Jail Governor John Robinson disclosed over the weekend that he had considered resigning his job "two or three times" during the past year because of difficulties with young prisoners.

Governor Robinson, due to retire at the end of May, said in an interview Saturday afternoon that a new kind of prisoner, more demanding and disdainful of rules and regulations, had made him happy to leave his job.

He also rapped "do-gooders" who he said were "getting as bad."

"We get an entirely different kind of prisoner now than we used to even a few years ago," Governor Robinson said. "These prisoners, mostly youngsters, don't think the rules and regulations should apply to them.

"I've had lots of prisoners with long records coming back here repeatedly and they were never as demanding as these ones we are getting now," he said.

"And the do-gooders are getting as bad. They never have first-hand knowledge of the things that go on and the conditions and attitude of these men, but they always have the answers so ready."

Governor Robinson, well-known and well respected by both law-breakers and law enforcers, has been at his post 22 years and has a reputation as a kindly and happy man.

Since taking the job after the Second World War at a time when few qualifications were necessary, he has seen the jail grow from a staff of 10 men and a matron to 29 men, three full-time and three part-time matrons.

With legal aid, innumerable appeals and other legal and penal forms to fill out, he has governed into what he termed "the era of elbow-deep paper work."

During his term of office, he has been held at gunpoint outside the jail once before bluffing the gunman into flight, beleaguered with 135 prisoners in his 93-cell jail, and once had to cope with 25 female prisoners at one time.

But none of these have made his job less of a pleasure he said. "It's the prisoners themselves that have made me happy to be going."

However the job has not been without its satisfactions.

"Pretty regularly when I'm walking downtown or shopping or something, I'll run into some young fellow I had in jail once," Governor Robinson said.

"He'll tell me he's employed and married and settled down and that's more than enough to make the job worthwhile.

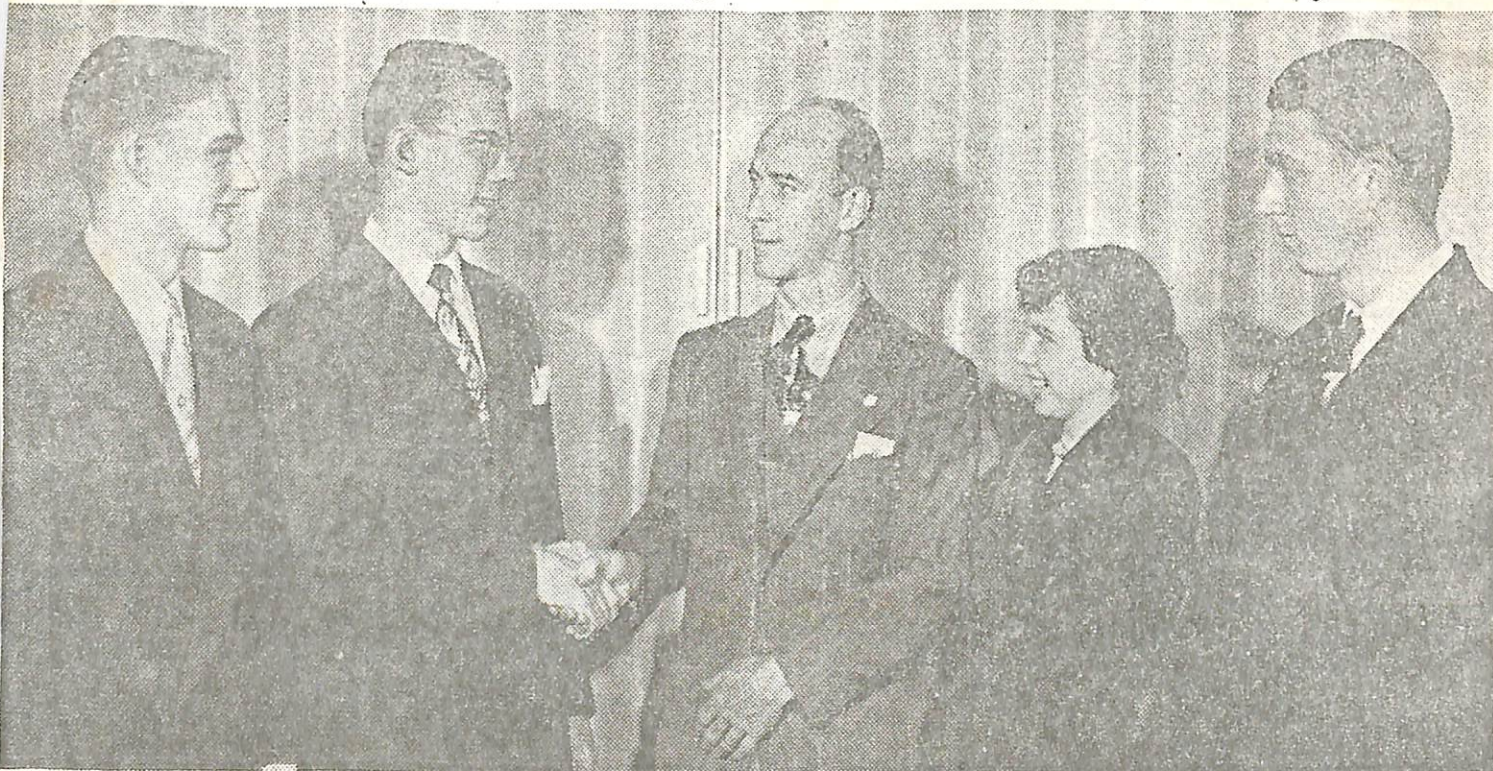

"I always try to point out to them where they're heading when they come in here young and knowing all the answers. It's a terrific reward to see them take it to heart and become good citizens."

Governor Robinson admits he is not a product of the professional penal system which is currently reforming penal practice and institutions.

But as one of his employees said—"He may not be as 'professional' as his successor, but you won't find many men like him any more."

Kiwanis Club Hears Young Orators on 'Agricultural Day'

Annual observance of "Agricultural Day" was marked yesterday by Windsor Kiwanians when oratorical finals were held during the club's luncheon meeting to determine the best of scores of youthful speakers from county high schools. The young people each spoke for five minutes on a topic of current interest—most of them on Communism versus Democracy. The winners are shown above.

Left to right: Bob Miner, Tilbury, third place winner; Keith Balmain, Leamington, who took first place; Mr. Ken Standing, soil specialist for the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Essex; Grace Eleanor Robinson, Essex, who finished in second place, and Garfield Grant, Harrow, fifth place winner. Rose Marie Gillies, Belle River, was not present when the photo was taken.

Segregation of teen-age prisoners from hardened criminals was one of the problems discussed when three county jail governors met Wednesday in Windsor.

Governor John Robinson of Essex County Jail was host to A. C. Stewart of Chatham, governor of Kent jail and Stan Teggart of Simcoe, Norfolk governor.

"We can't guarantee segregation of the youths when we're full," said Governor Robinson.

The others agreed they face similar problems—aggravated by the age of their jails.

In that respect Governor Robinson is comparatively well off with a 38-year-old structure.

The Chatham jail was built in 1849 and Simcoe dates from 1832.

The county jails are responsible for prisoners serving sentences up to 60 days. They also must hold all prisoners who are remanded in custody pending trial.

The three jails are about the same size. Each can handle about 1,000 prisoners a year.

GOVERNORS MEET—Three county jail governors had an informal meeting to talk over common problems Wednesday in Windsor. From left, A. C. Stewart of Chatham,

NEW GOVERNOR TAKES OVER—James A. Rundle officially took over as governor of the Essex County Jail this morning from John Robinson. Mr. Robinson will remain on the job for another month in an advisory capacity. Mr. Robinson, left, turns over the keys to the jail's main door to Mr. Rundle.

Robinson A house with a heart

John Robinson, a jailer with a heart, couldn't have asked for a better memorial than Robinson House, soon to be opened in Windsor.

Robinson, who died two months ago, was Governor of the Essex County Jail from 1945 until his retirement in 1967. Dealing with all types of humanity from first offender to hardened repeater, he was firm but understanding. To him, those committed to the jail were people, not simply prisoners.

His approach earned him the respect of most who came in contact with him, and the gratitude of many former inmates whose first brush with the law, thanks to "the Governor's" advice, turned out to be their last.

The Essex County Jail of those days is now the Windsor Provincial Jail, but the memory, and the attitudes, of John Robinson live on.

His successor, Superintendent Victor Villeneuve, has been working with a local committee interested in law and the treatment of offenders, and the result will be Robinson House.

The centre bearing Governor Robinson's name will house people who have to spend time serving short court-imposed sentences, usually for offences which do not include violence.

Typical inmates might be young offenders, prisoners qualified for day leave for work, training, or guidance, and short-term inmates whose medical history might make a stay in jail a much more severe penalty than the courts intended.

This is individual treatment, but not mollycoddling. It follows long accepted principles of penology. It is officially approved to the point where the Ontario Ministry of Correctional Services will fund its operation and help train its staff.

Most of all, it follows the principles practiced by John Robertson, a practical penologist long before his time.

Robinson House will put into practice the ideas that he lived — trying to understand those who have gone wrong, to help them instead of merely punishing them.

Governor Robinson Singled Out For Special Commendation

The Essex County Jail and its officials and staff came in for high praise yesterday when the Ontario Legislature's select committee on reform institutions visited here.

CALLED OUTSTANDING

"This is a very outstanding institution," said W. J. Stewart, Progressive Conservative member for Parkdale and chairman of the committee, which has been touring Southwestern Ontario reform institutions this week. His words were echoed by the three committee members who accompanied him.

Singled out for special commendation was Governor John Robinson. "There's a man who really has his heart in his work," whispered Mr. Stewart to Essex County Sheriff Bruce A. E. Clouse while Governor Robinson was absent from the room.

Committee members spent an afternoon touring the jail, talking with inmates and staff members, and checking records. They met afterward in the governor's office for a formal discussion of the jail. Today the committee is to visit the Wayne County Jail in Detroit before returning to Toronto.

Accompanying the chairman yesterday were Rev. A. W. Downer, Progressive Conservative, Dufferin-Simcoe; James S. Dempsey, Progressive Conservative, Renfrew South; W. J. Grummett, Cochrane South, a C.C.F. House leader.

'ONE OF BEST'

After committee members had queried Mr. Robinson about various aspects of jail administration, Mr. Downer commented, "This is one of the best institutions we have visited so far. We can say that without reservation."

Committee members agreed with local officials that there is a great need for a full-time probation officer in Windsor, and Mr. Stewart said he understands that the Ontario attorney-general's department has plans for such an officer in each judicial district of the province.

"I think I can say that the committee is unanimously sold on the merits of the probation system," said Mr. Stewart. "With the increase of population in the province, it's a question of either building more institutions or cutting down the incidence of crime."

MORE SUSPENDED TERMS

With a competent probation system in operation, Mr. Grummett suggested, magistrates and judges would make use of suspended sentences more than they do at present, when there is no check on the activities of a person on suspended sentence.

Committee members also showed great interest in the good results of a recent substantial increase in the salaries paid jail guards in Essex County. Higher wages, Governor Robinson told the committee, has made it easier to hire capable men and have stopped the drain of trained men into industry and other fields where wages are more attractive.

Starting salaries at the jail are now on about the same level as those paid rookie policemen on the Windsor force, the governor said.

Anniversary: 20 Years in Jail

Friends, Staff Fete Governor Robinson

John Robinson has just ended 20 years in Essex County jail.

He hopes to spend many more of his years there—as a staff member, of course.

Mr. Robinson is governor of the jail.

His fellow workers and friends gave him a surprise party Wednesday to mark his two decades with the jail.

Since the party was inside the jail, this meant restrictions (it was strictly tea and cake).

But it was still a happy event for "The Guv."

An anniversary also is usually a good occasion for an interview and Governor Robinson had some things to say.

He is especially concerned about teen-agers who enter jail.

"Most often the youth who breaks the law has quit school at an early age and failed to keep church affiliations, or is just plain lazy," John Robinson said.

Robberies, breakins and large thefts in which youngsters are involved are, in many cases directed by an adult leader, he said.

"These adult gang leaders exercise control through fear or by enticement with visions of leisure without having to put forth any great effort.

"You won't catch me carrying around any lunch box," is often said by these youngsters and typifies a trend of thought amongst them.

"Many teen-agers get their start in crime by giving up school so they may spend their time around pool halls and corners.

"While hanging around these locations they learn there are other ways of picking up money besides working. They go looking for the 'fast buck.'

"About the only thing they ever find is the way to end up behind bars."

To deal effectively with these individuals jail officials must find out their backgrounds, the governor said.

This information is gained through interviews with inmates by the governor, talks with parents and probation officers and by censoring mail.

him vital clues about the youths.

Visits from the parents are encouraged, but Mr. Robinson said many times it's difficult to get the parents to visit.

He recalls one case where a parent who brought some money to the jail for his son was asked if he wanted to see his child. His answer was "Well, I might as well see the so-and-so."

When the youngster was asked if he wanted to see his father his reply was the same as his father's.

Governor Robinson said he and the parent talked for several hours about small things—things the parent and the boy did in earlier times.

The boy had been in continual conflict with the law and showed a disregard for others. Most of the trouble stemmed from a poor father-son relationship.

The two were brought together in the jail cell.

Following a chat, the youngster said he was going to go straight — and he did.

Another time Governor Robinson interviewed a young man in jail who had come from a good home.

The only thing this youngster never had was responsibility, and lack of this put him behind bars.

Mr. Robinson said he was able to get the youth into the navy. The governor didn't hear from the youngster for more than a year. Then one Sunday the youth dropped into the jail. This time on his own. The navy had given him responsibility.

A show of concern and interest in a youngster doesn't have to be extreme, but often it helps him to realize the place he must take in society.

Remembering...

Jail governor John Robinson

By JIM McNULTY

John Robinson had the kind of job most folks seldom hear about.

It was a demanding position, at once thankless and rewarding, where a person could toil for years and be a relative unknown among the populace.

You may not recognize the name. But policemen and court officials and ex-inmates know John Robinson as the former governor of the Essex County Jail, a post he held for 22 years.

Before retiring in 1967, he dealt with the criminal element on a daily basis, which sometimes meant facing gun-wielding robbers or tracking down dangerous escapees. Other times it meant showing a little kindness and understanding in a pent-up world of frustration and hate. Always, there was a heavy responsibility.

John Robinson did the job well and was praised by government and police court officials dozens of times during his career.

Now 79, Mr. Robinson's health is declining and he lives with a daughter, Bernice, and her husband, Bob, in their South Windsor home, walking with aid of a cane since doctors have discovered he suffers bone cancer. Still, he manages a wide smile and warm handshake when greeting visitors at the door.

"It was a shocker when the doctors told me," he says candidly, settling down for a chat in the antique-filled living room. "I've been feeling less than myself for the past year, but I thought it was age."

"There's no sense crying, though. I made my mind up to make the best of it and keep as active as I could."

Mr. Robinson doesn't dwell on his health: soon he's cheerfully reminiscing about his hometown of Moonstone, near Orillia. "It wasn't much of a town," he laughs. "A few stores and a post office — something like North Woodlee. My father had a store there and I remember the foodstuff would come in bulk packages. We'd measure everything out of big barrels."

Later, the family moved to nearby Coldwater and Mr. Robinson attended high school there until he joined the army and went overseas in 1916 to fight in the First World War. At the end of hostilities, he returned home and married in 1922 before moving to the Windsor area, where he worked with the Sandwich South Municipal Telephone System.

John Robinson

In 1945, he was hired on as governor of the jail, the practice then being to appoint war veterans to such posts. He trained for the job in Toronto.

"There were a lot of things happening when I first arrived," recalls Mr. Robinson. "There was a fellow by the name of John Shemko who was scheduled to be executed for murder, and I was supposed to be in the execution party."

"Well, I didn't know if I could come to terms with it, because I had spent a lot of time talking with him and often saw him praying. I couldn't sleep at night thinking about it. As it turned out, he had a new trial and was set free."

The memories are strong and Mr. Robinson rattles off several other incidents as if they had happened yesterday.

Star Staff Reporter 1981

LAST SEPTEMBER, Charles Sennett died in the Windsor Provincial Jail on Brock Street less than 24 hours after being sentenced to a seven-day term for impaired driving.

At the inquest in November, Coroner Dr. D. J. Broadwell said the 45-year-old Windsor man suffered a "terrible heart attack" that could have been triggered by his anxiety at being sent to jail.

One of the recommendations of the coroner's jury was the establishment of a centre which would house prisoners serving short sentences for non-violent crimes in a home-like setting in the community.

NOW, EIGHT MONTHS later, plans for such a community centre are nearing completion.

The only hurdle is to locate a large

One night in 1946, he was attacked by men with guns in the jail garage. "I heard this voice in the darkness say 'stick 'em up' and I figured that was the end. Then I hollered for a gun and it must have scared them off. We formed a search party and found a gun but never discovered who it was."

And Mr. Robinson recalls Matthew Lamb, the Windsor man who died while fighting for the Rhodesian army earlier this month. Lamb was charged with double murder in 1967, but was found not guilty by reason of insanity.

"He spent some time at the jail and we isolated him at his own request because he was afraid of what he might do," said Mr. Robinson. "Lamb had two totally different personalities."

"When he was in his proper state of mind, he was a fellow you couldn't help but like. But he could be vicious."

The years at the jail made an obvious impact on Mr. Robinson's life, and they were years he enjoyed. "I always tried to impress on the officers that inmates were human beings and no one should take a domineering attitude. There was too much of that in the army."

"Now, when I walk down the street, occasionally I'll run into former inmates and they smile and say, 'hello, Mr. Robinson.'"

"It makes me feel good."

Since retirement, a great deal of his time has been spent restoring antique furniture, which he proudly shows to visitors. His daughter's living room is filled with old couches, chairs, pictures and smaller items, and in the basement an old clock from the jail hangs on the wall.

Mr. Robinson was once active in the Ontario Baseball Association and Royal Canadian Legion (he served as president of the Essex branch) but is no longer involved.

"Now, I just like to visit around, and do as much as I can."

house which will be able to accommodate up to 16 prisoners.

The new centre will be called Robinson House, to commemorate a former governor of the Windsor Jail, John Robinson, who died March 9. Robinson was a much-respected and popular governor of the jail for 22 years. He retired in 1967 and was considered to have been a prison official who cared.

A group of local lawyers, businessmen, labor officials and concerned citizens have formed a non-profit company to run the house.

Jim Lawrenson, local deputy-director for the Ontario Legal Aid plan is chairman of the board of directors.

Agreements have been signed with the provincial Ministry of Correctional Services to transfer prisoners from the Windsor Jail to Robinson House when it goes into operation sometime in the fall.

The ministry will also fund the complete operation, and will help train the full-time staff and director of five or six people.

A Windsor woman, Violet Burns, has been hired as the director, but none of the other staff have been hired.

Finding a house large enough for 16 people has been a problem.

"AS SOON AS we get a house, we'll be ready to go," said Lawrenson.

Those eligible for Robinson House will be prisoners serving short sentences for driving offences and other non-violent crimes, as well as those normally eligible for the Temporary Absence Program (TAP) at the Windsor Jail.

Under TAP, the jail releases some prisoners during the day for work, education or rehabilitative programs and they return to the institution each night.

But TAP requires a fairly thorough investigation before a prisoner is accepted for it, jail superintendent Victor Villeneuve explained.

A recommendation from the sentencing judge is required before a prisoner is considered for temporary absence. Probation officers, police, and the prisoner's employer are also contacted.

The employer must agree to co-operate with the program, since the prisoner's pay goes to jail officials, who make sure it reaches the inmate's family, or is applied to restitution, or fines.

Villeneuve said it normally takes two to three weeks to complete the inquiries for the temporary absence program, although the process can be expedited for those serving short sentences.

But when someone is sentenced to a seven or 14-day term, much of the sentence may be completed before the paperwork for TAP is completed.

WHEN ROBINSON House goes into operation, prisoners with such short sentences may go directly to the centre without spending a single night in the jail.

Five prisoners are currently being released from the jail on temporary absence.

The figure may appear small, when compared to the total jail population of 86 men and six women. But 46 prisoners are on remand from various stages in their trial, while another 16 are due to be transferred to serve sentences at other correctional institutions.

Of the 23 remaining inmates, seven are working at the jail, doing laundry, kitchen and other duties. Although they are not paid, they are credited with time off their sentences.

For example, a prisoner serving a 30-day term gets an automatic one-third off for good behavior — revoked only in rare cases — leaving 20 days to be served. Working in the jail kitchen might earn another five days off towards a release after just 15 days.

The Windsor Jail only receives prisoners serving a 90-day term or less, although in special circumstances those serving slightly longer sentences will be kept. Those serving 90-day to less than two-year terms go to provincial correctional institutions and those with longer sentences go to federal penitentiaries.

ROBINSON HOUSE will be operated independently from the jail.

However, if a prisoner at the house causes problems, he can be sent back to the jail to complete his sentence.

Lawrenson credits Villeneuve for much of the initiative to establish Robinson House. Work on the project began almost a year ago.

Community resources centres have been established across the province, mostly in the last six years.

However, Windsor has not had such a facility since Millhouse, a halfway house for soon-to-be-released prisoners, closed several years ago.

Building a life without bars

By Ed Piccinin

A year-old experiment that puts prisoners in a jail without bars is proving successful, both for the prisoners and the community.

That's certainly the opinion of "Lucky."

Aged 64, he is an inmate. He has a heart problem. He has served about 30 years behind bars and about two months at Robinson House.

Lucky goes home this week.

"I've done just about everything short of murder," he said. "But Robinson House is nothing like the other places I've been to. Here you're not under the gun; there's no one holding an axe over your head. Here you're at home — you're a human being.

"THIS PLACE IS RIGHT at the top of my hit parade. They've treated me as though I'm something special; they've treated me with respect. I'm the cook's helper and I've done work I didn't have to, like painting the kitchen.

"This is a fine home and these are fine people. And, besides, I'm now in my 64th year and I can't compete with the sophisticated equipment they have out there.

"A thief hasn't got a chance any more; he might as well take a different outlook on life."

More than 150 men convicted of non-violent crimes have made Robinson House their home during their sentences.

The house, opened a year ago, is a tidy, Caron Avenue residence with a white picket fence named for the late John Robinson, governor of Windsor Jail for 22 years.

IT'S AN ALTERNATIVE to jail. This rehabilitation house, or "community resource centre," enables convicts to make restitution to their victims as productive members of society.

The centre has a 12-resident capacity. Ten men are living there now, and nine are working taxpayers who also pay the maximum $42 weekly for room and board, said Assistant Director Walter McGuigan.

One objective of the centre is to prevent a drain on the community's economy, he said. It costs $68 per day to maintain a prisoner in the Windsor Jail, compared to $28 at Robinson House.

The centre's main goal, however, is prisoner rehabilitation.

"WE PREPARE THEM with a homey atmosphere," McGuigan said. "We teach them how to take care of a house, how to handle money and we try to upgrade their education.

"They either use the system or they abuse it. And if they abuse it, they go right back to jail."

But Windsor Jail Superintendent Vic Villeneuve said since Robinson House opened, such disciplinary action was resorted to only twice on prisoners who breached the terms of their temporary-absence permits. Another 14 men were sent back to jail because they could not adapt to house rules.

He said police prefer the centre deal internally with absent prisoners and misconduct, rather than going through the courts.

"THE COURTS WOULD likely give that person a suspended sentence, but I see them as much more serious offences."

Nevertheless, Villeneuve said it is now apparent the courts are using Robinson House for judicial expediency.

A person sentenced to jail for 90 days or more is processed through the provincial penal classification section in Toronto, a process which takes three weeks. The majority of prisoners in Robinson House, however, are serving 89-day terms, and processing them takes just one week.

"We have a continual turnover," Villeneuve said. "This month five are leaving, and they'll be replaced by five more."

WHILE THERE HAVE been no studies of the rate of recidivism (return to custody) of Robinson House inmates, Villeneuve points with pride to another mark of the home's success:

"Last week the parole board accepted all nine applications for parole," Villeneuve said. "That is exceptional."

Villeneuve said community work programs are not the only form of restitution. "Sometimes we have the residents meet their victims to show that it's not only property damaged, but another person.

He rose to a yard smothered in pink

It's not unusual for Ron Robson to get up with the birds shortly after 6 a.m. each morning, but he got more than he bargained for Tuesday: The birds turned out to be 68 pink flamingos.

That's what Robson, 39, found planted on his front lawn in Oldcastle when he got up to go to work.

"I guess you have to take it in the context it was done. It was funny," Robson said Tuesday.

The pink flamingo caper began about two weeks ago when Robson and other fellow employees at Arvid Machine Tools Ltd. in Windsor purchased a $1 raffle ticket. The winner of the raffle would be entitled to choose someone to receive the flock of pink flamingos, which would be delivered in the middle of the night and remain for 24 hours.

"When I saw them on the lawn, I knew the ticket I'd bought hadn't won," said Robson, who works in the purchasing department at Arvid.

"Actually, at first I thought they'd made a mistake. I'd told them if I won the raffle to deliver the flamingos to my brother-in-law (Rick Welwood) who lives next door."

But the unnamed culprits did deliver the colorful birds to the right address, said raffle winner Linda Foulon.

"RON WASN'T MY first choice; my boss was out of town," said Foulon, savoring the moment with a hearty laugh.

"We thought Ron could take a joke pretty well and he did. But he didn't know who did it. I guess he will when he reads this."

After the initial shock of pink, Robson asked his wife, Judy, to remove them when he left for work.

"I was going to deny the birds were ever there, but when I got to work one of the guys showed up with some Polaroids he'd taken early this morning. There was a real conspiracy to get me," Robson said.

"Apparently, my neighbors saw the car pull in the driveway, but they agreed to go along with it. Shows you just how many friends I've got."

For the seniors

A report on U.K.

By Barbara Ford

Dick Roe, one of those men who keeps as busy in retirement as he ever did on the job at Ford Company of Canada, gave me some copies of the Norwich Mercury, his hometown newspaper from England. So of course I had to check and find out what the retirees there are doing these days.

For one thing, I found that older people in England are also referred to as senior citizens, but they have some imaginative names for their clubs. In the district news section I found the Jessopp Old Peoples' Luncheon Club, Thorpe, Happy Circle, Good Companions' Club which appeared in just about every community and Vintage Club. The origin of this last one is open to speculation.

Several towns had Over Sixties clubs and then there was the Senior Social Club and the Old Comrades. References were often made to senior citizens in describing club or church activities and when I asked a woman who has just moved to Windsor from southern England if they called older people "senior citizens" in her village, she said "Sure. What else would you call us?" I guess we're stuck with the term, folks.

Activities in Norwich are similar to what keeps our retirees busy: theatre and bus trips, showing of vacation slides, bingo 50th anniversary parties, bring and buy sales, as well as quizzes for prizes, domino tournaments and something called "Competitions" was mentioned often but I don't know what it refers to.

There was a report about a brewery pensioners' club which has a successful visiting scheme whereby retired brewery workers call on each other in a regular and rotating manner. This seems like an excellent idea.

One thing that retirees miss is the comradeship of their fellow workers. They can make trips back to the shop or office, but everybody is working, of course, and there are too many new faces. Their buddies may be retired too and suddenly there is nobody to talk to about the good old days.

It's hard to retire some people, though. I read about one man in Norwich who insisted at the age of 82 that he was retiring for the third and last time. He had worked 39 years in a coach firm, eight years at a petrol pump and five years as a lollipop man.

This last term was a new one on me, but it means a school crossing guard. Their stop signs looked so much like red lollipops that the name soon stuck.

Then there was an article about the birthday celebration of a woman aged 104 years who lives with her 97-year-old sister. They managed simple housekeeping but didn't get out anymore. On this occasion town officials came to call and then a group of choirboys from the church arrived wearing their choir gowns.

The pastor had been making regular visits but the sisters missed hearing the choir's anthems, so on this birthday the boys sang a medley of their favorite hymns such as "Abide With Me". A thoughtful tribute!

Headlines on one issue called attention to "Pensioner-Power" and reported that they were rounding up support for lower bus fares. A new organization had been formed called the Association for the Fair Treatment of Senior Citizens.

Transportation for older people remains a problem no matter where you live.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD NORMAN ROE

Ruth Goodwyn Weds Richard Norman Roe

In an impressive ceremony at Roseland United Church, Rev. W. Burton Crowe united in marriage Ruth Elizabeth Goodwyn and Richard Norman Roe. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Goodwyn of Roseland Dr. E. and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Roe of Ducharme Ave.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white satin with a fitted bodice highlighted by a bateau neckline and long sleeves. The full skirt extended into a chapel train appliqued with Alencon lace and embroidered with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. Her illusion veil was held by a crown of seed pearls, iridescent beads and lace and she carried yellow roses and white stephanotis.

Mary Hamilton of Port Credit was the maid of honor and Sandra Hutcheson and Susan Goodwyn were the bridesmaids. Herb Burke served as best man and the ushers were Doug Fisher, Ron Kerr, Myron Gaul and Bill Goodwyn.

A reception at the church hall followed. For a trip to Northern Ontario the bride chose a shocking pink silk linen suit with matching hat and black accessories and an orchid corsage.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Goodwyn and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Haight of Oakville, Mrs. Grace MacLean and Mr. and Mrs. Bryon Lefebvre of St. Catharines, Mr. and Mrs. George Rihbany of Burlington, Mr. and Mrs. Glynn Shafley and Mr. and Mrs. Ruskin Keyes and Joan of Kitchener, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Dales of Waterloo, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Scarlett of Sarnia and Mr. and Mrs. George Michii of Don Mills. Also here from out-of-town were Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Woodard, Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Woodard and Emily Roe of Toronto, Jackie McCoombs and Cam Docksater of London, Beth Goddard and Doug Jamieson of Hensall, Mr. and Mrs. Doug Rowe and Henry Johnson of Pembroke, Mrs. Eva Johnson of Galt and Jan Proud and Jackie Manson of St. Thomas.

Seniors Barb is proud to know

By Barbara Ford

"Annie has a lot to put up with," Dick Roe said, and Annie just laughed. She certainly doesn't have to worry about her 88-year-old husband being underfoot. If he's not digging a trench in the garden, he's working on his family history or the history of the Universalist Church, Olinda, or meeting with the Ford movie and camera club... or most likely he's over at Windsor airport.

Although he doesn't own or fly a plane, he's a true aerial enthusiast and has flown as navigator or passenger with many area pilots. Dick is active with chapter 185 of the Experimental Aircraft Association and writes the monthly newsletter, Log Sheet.

Whether he's flying around Essex County in a small homemade airplane, a gyrocopter or a glider, he's making notes, interviewing the pilot and taking movies.

I'll bet not many Windso-rites went to Expo 67 in a Piper Cub... but Dick did.

Life itself is the big tonic that keeps him on the go...

By BARBARA FORD

"When I hear people, young as well as old, say they are bored, I cannot understand it. It's a great world; it's good to be alive, to have the opportunity to play even a small part in trying to make it a little bit better."

That's Dick Roe's philosophy. And he lives it too.

Despite his 83 years, Dick is a man on the go. And most of the time he prefers to go by air.

Dick, you see, is an aerial enthusiast.

He doesn't own a plane or fly himself but he's been a navigator or passenger with many area pilots.

He's also an aerial photographer and for the last 10 years has been editor of the Log Sheet, a monthly newsletter of the Experimental Aircraft Association, Chapter 185, at Windsor Airport.

At a recent association fly-in, Dick went up with three pilots.

One of his most memorable flights was as a navigator on a flight with a neighbor, George Mann to Expo 67 in a Piper Cub.

Dick's interest in flying started when George was building a Volksplane One at home. Soon he was meeting local enthusiasts like Spitfire pilot Gerry Billing, Dr. Murray O'Neil and the late Don Plumb.

Dick began writing articles about the pilots and before long he was putting these accounts in the printed form which became the log sheet.

Sometimes he carries a tape recorder on flights to catch the pilot-to-tower conversations.

He has a committee of seven now to help get the newsletter out to the 50-member club. "It's a fine way to get lots of flying time," he said.

Dick worked a few years for Walter Coulter's Camera Shop after his retirement from the Ford Motor Company. And he has a collection of spectacular aerial photographs and pictures of planes in various stages of construction.

Dick and three other members of the association recently represented their club in Detroit for a welcoming of the flying replica of the Spirit of St. Louis, which was retracing the tour made by Charles Lindbergh in 1927 after his solo flight across the Atlantic.

Dick also had a keen interest in scouting.

After moving to Canada from England in 1912 he organized the 26th Toronto scout troop that was famous for its travelling bugle band.

He served in France during the First World War then came to Windsor where he organized the 10th Windsor scout troop in 1920.

The troop met first in a shack at McKay and Union streets, then a Wyandotte Street school at Curry Avenue, before ending up in the clubroom over McConnell's garage on Crawford Avenue.

Dick remembers the camping days at Haliburton fondly and has kept in touch with many of his 'boys.'

Dick corresponds with many people and keeps notes about his and wife, Annie's family history.

Someday he wants to revisit his hometown of Norwich, England. He is writing his reminiscences of boyhood days there.

Dick also recalls a memorable trip in 1921 when he drove a Model T from Windsor to the Pacific — in the days before there were decent highways through the Rockies.

He would like to take the vacation again. But this time by flying to Edmonton and taking a bus to Banff.

"In the meantime, he said, there's life to be lived, books to read and challenges to be met."

His problem is finding enough hours in the day to do all the things he'd like to do.

He's 90 and flyin' high

By Roseann Danese

Star Staff Reporter

Dick Roe stands no taller than 157 cm (5 ft. 2 in.). "Bare naked", he tips the scales at a slim 54 kg (120 lb).

Friday was his 90th birthday, but he's still as fiery as an energetic 20-year-old.

As a birthday present to himself, he went out and proved that you're only as old as you feel.

At the headquarters of Windsor's Flying Club, Roe climbed into the driver's seat of a four-passenger Cherokee Warrior and flew it.

"It's a perfect thrill," he said after the half-hour flight. "It does something for me to know I can do this."

Roe isn't a stranger to small aircraft.

HE'S BEEN A member of the Windsor Experimental Air Association and took his first flight in a neighbor's small airplane in 1961.

He's since been a passenger in a number of airplanes with friends from the Windsor Flying Club, who gave him a pilot's lesson and the keys to one of their aircrafts for a birthday gift.

Sporting a Windsor Flying Club hat and a flashy three-piece suit, Roe got off the small Cherokee, smiled, and greeted a small group of well-wishers who came to meet him.

"I can't understand how people can be so bored in such a wonderful world," he said.

Was he nervous about piloting a plane for the first time.

"NERVOUS! THIS is my life. I'll tell you, last Sunday I got to ride a motorcycle. Then, I was reeeeeeally nervous."

"Well you are 90 years old," someone added.

"Yeah, but the doctor told me I'm good for another 10 years."

Roe might not have been nervous, but hinted that his wife, Annie, certainly was. He said it would depend on what she thought about his new mode of transportation before he'd make flying a regular habit.

As for Friday's outing, Roe said he didn't think twice about it.

"Think twice about it? Oh heavens, no. This is the ultimate," he said.

With the chief flying instructor from Windsor's flying club as a passenger, Roe circled Detroit and Essex County.

"This was a glorious day," he said. "It was something that made my life worth living a little more."

ASIDE FROM FLYING, Roe finds time to do gardening, photography, study philosophy and edit the Experimental Air Association's 10-page newsletter each month.

"Any one of my hobbies could be a full-time job," he said.

Even though Roe drives a 1983 Escort — "with power brakes and power steering" — nothing compares to the thrill of flying to him.

He said it is described best in the first line of the poem High Flight: "Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of earth, and danced the skies on laughter..."

On that note he moved on to the flying club's office, where a birthday cake, his wife and a group of friends awaited him.

Dinner and Reception for 550
After Rosnovan-Birch Wedding

JULY 29, 1955

The Rev. Nestorian Cicala and the Rev. George Nan officiated at the marriage of Miss Eileen Fern Birch, daughter of Mrs. William Blake of Windsor and Mr. Ray Birch of Belle River, to Mr. John Rosnovan Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rosnovan of Maidstone, at St. George's Romanian Greek Orthodox Church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor-length gown of French imported lace over satin. The bodice featured a tiny stand-up collar of lace and a yoke of nylon net with scalloped lace appliques centred with iridescent sequins extending over the shoulder.

The long, lace sleeves formed points over her hands, and the hooped skirt of lace had a wide scallop at the hemline and a train of matching lace. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held by a crown of white marquisette centred with iridescent sequins, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white and red roses and stephanotis with white feathered carnations.

Mrs. George Cirila, the bridegroom's godmother, as matron of honor, wore a floor-length gown of orchid nylon over taffeta. The bodice featured a sweetheart neckline and cap sleeves. She wore a rhinestone tiara and carried a cascade of yellow roses centred with an orchid bow.

Miss Jenny Simpson, Miss Linda Adams, Mrs. Donna Roberts and Mrs. June McPherson, as bridesmaids wore gowns styled identically in lime, shrimp, blue and yellow respectively. The strapless bodices were net in front and pleated taffeta in back. Wisted taffeta sashes and hooped skirts of ruffled net over taffeta were further wore matching taffeta boleros with Chinese collars, and wide-brimmed picture hats. Their bouquets were cascades of carnations.

Little Patsy Theodore of Detroit, as flower girl, wore aqua net styled identically to the bridesmaids' gowns except for the bodice, which had three straps over each shoulder. She wore a matching net bonnet and carried a basket of shaded carnations.

Mr. Cirila, the bridegroom's godfather, was best man and the ushers were Mr. Tony Tardich of Detroit, Mr. Clare Pierce of Cottam, Mr. Myron Roberts of Essex and Mr. Duncan McPherson.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Blake chose a blue crepe dress with pink inserts at the bodice. She wore a white hat and white accessories. Her corsage was of deep pink carnations. Mrs. Birch wore rose lace with silver threads running through the material, and a rose hat. Her corsage was of yellow carnations.

A reception and dinner followed for 550 guests at the Casa Romana Hall. The bride's table was centred with a four-tiered wedding cake embedded in tulle and flanked by large candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosnovan left later for a trip to Northern Ontario, the bride traveling in a white suit trimmed with black. She wore red and white accessories and a corsage of red roses. They will reside at 1495 Gladstone avenue, and will later take up residence in Detroit.

Their love knew no boundaries

If the bureaucrats had known what marriage held in store for Rolanda and Eric Russell, maybe they wouldn't have tried so hard to prevent it.

The Russells, of Sandwich South, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary this week, and recalled how they had to battle two national governments and the United Nations in order to tie the knot.

"They had to have a sitting of (Canadian) Parliament just to decide if we could get married," Eric said proudly Sunday.

He and Rolanda had just finished a family dinner with their six children and three grandchildren, a few hours after returning from a second honeymoon in St. Petersburg, Fla.

In the comfort of their living room, the couple, now in their 40s, recalled how their romance made the front pages.

IT WAS DECEMBER, 1957, in Abu Suer, 120 km (75 miles) outside Cairo, Egypt. When they fell in love and decided to marry, they became the first couple in the UN Expeditionary Force in the Middle East to wed — after a nightmare battle with "the authorities."

"They didn't want us to even mingle (with the locals)," much less marry, said Eric. He was a 20-year-old Canadian signaller serving with the UN peacekeeping force.

"Rolanda worked in the canteen and I used to go over every day to buy cigarettes and chocolate bars," Eric said.

He "got to like" the beautiful 17-year-old, born in Egypt but holding Italian citizenship.

"I wouldn't date soldiers, but he was so persistent," says Rolanda.

But the Canadian government and the UN used almost every method at their disposal to prevent the match, Eric said.

Permission was finally given, however, after Eric badgered his superiors. "I drove them crazy. I remember standing in 100-degree heat for hours outside my commander's office waiting to hear the decision."

They were married Feb. 1, 1958, in Ismailia, Egypt, and honeymooned in Cairo. A few months later Eric returned to Windsor with his bride.

Alda Russette, Roseland pioneer dead

by Barbara Ford

Alda L. Russette (nee Morand) died at Hotel Dieu Hospital October 16 at the age of 75 years. Funeral was held at St. Clare Roman Catholic Church and interment was at St. Alphonsus Cemetery.

Mrs. Russette will long be remembered by her many friends as a warm person who loved to laugh, and for her intense interest in others. She also was a member of one of the pioneer families of Roseland, when South Windsor was a vast, sparsely-populated farmland.

Her father, Moise Morand was born in Tecumseh and her mother Virginia Ducharme Morand came from St. Joseph near Lake Huron. It was about 1884 when they bought a one hundred acre farm in Roseland and lived in a log cabin which was located on the present Ducharme Street near the Howard Avenue intersection. Later they built the homestead which is still in the family and situated across from the church on Howard Avenue between Morand and Ducharme, streets which were given family names when the farm was subdivided.

Mrs. Russette had three brothers: Gilbert, who lives in Roseland, Ferdine who died in 1962 and the Hon. Raymond D. Morand who died in 1951. She was the widow of Leo J. Russette (1972) and is survived by her daughter Mrs. Richard Saro (Veronica) of Huntington Woods, Michigan and ten grandchildren. She was predeceased by two daughters, Mrs. James Hobson (Virginia) in 1970 and Mrs. Roy Adams (Leola) in 1975.

Girl Guides in the area remember Alda Russette very well. It was in her home (corner of Morand and Howard at that time) that the Roseland company of Girl Guides was organized in 1944 and they met at the Women's Institute Hall (a company which is still very active and which honored Mrs. Russette recently at an anniversary). She was also a charter member of the Roseland Women's Institute, joining in 1917. She was president in 1967-68 and was also honored by this organization recently.

Mrs. Russette was a member of St. Clare's Catholic Women's League and League of the Sacred Heart, a life member of the Roseland Women's Institute and honorary member of the local Girl Guides Council.

In Memoriam

In cherished and loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Roy J. Russette who passed away six years ago, September 19th, 1955.

Though death's stern hands divide us,

Our thoughts still turn to thee
Our memory always lingers,
Over days that used to be.

A few more steps along life's road.

Perhaps a few more years.

And by God's grace we'll meet again

—Ever remembered by his wife and family.
